Floods Sweep Eastern U.S. —Toll Is 102

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Floodwaters smashed through a sandbag barrier protecting downtown Wilkes-Barre, Pa., surged into Pittsburgh's Golden Triangle and posed a major threat to Wheeling, W.Va., today as the most extensive flooding in American history spread westward.

Some of the rampaging rivers, including the James at Richmond, Va., and the Allegheny in New York's Southern Tier, began receding and the National Weather Service said the rain was tapering off to occasional showers in the devastated Northeast.

The death toll stood at 102 with property damage estimated at well over $1 billion in the week-long deluge spawned by tropical storm Agnes, the first of the hurricane season. President Nixon declared five states disaster areas.

Pennsylvania was hardest hit with 47 dead and whole cities evacuated as rampaging waters spilled over their banks. The state capital of Harrisburg was inundated by the waters of the Susquehanna which the Weather Service said would crest tonight at 17 feet above flood level.

"I feel reasonable sure that the worst is yet to come," Pennsylvania's lieutenant governor, Ernest P. Kline, said at a morning news briefing.

Nixon flew by helicopter over devasated areas of Maryland and Pennsylvania to Harrisburg later and, escorted by Kline, he saw some 700 refugees being fed and housed by the Red Cross at William Penn

EOC 'Mercy Killing' —Funding Is Denied

Board Refuses $40,000 Request Despite Pleas

By ERIK M. INGRAM

In what was termed a "mercy killing" by one observer, Marin County supervisors yesterday dealt a fianancial death blow to the Marin County Economic Opportunity Council.

The board's action, which took the form of tabling an EOC request for $40,000 to match federal funds, came during the eighth and final day of hearings on the proposed $47.4 million county budget.

EOC officials pleaded at length for the county funds as a show of local support for their agency, which is in the process of repaying the federal government about $100,000 that was misused last year.

Without the county's share, the federal Office of Economic Opportunity will shut down the local poverty agency, EOC board chairman Barbara Eaton told supervisors.

Further, she warned, if her agency goes under it could drag the Marin County Head Start preschool program down with it.

(Until this week, the preschool program for underprivileged children was operated by parents. On Wednesday, the Office of Child Development — which finances the program — ordered it placed under direct control of the EOC.)

(A spokesman for the federal agency refused to discuss the action with the Independent-Journal, which has been told the action was taken to help justify the EOC budget request.)

Mrs. Eaton, supported by members of her board, told the supervisors $146,000 in preschool funds plus about $90,000 in EOC funds would be lost this year if the county failed to help bankroll her agency.

The board balked, however, at any suggestion that it pump additional county funds into the

Mount Tam, Petaluma Road Deaths

Two persons died in auto crashes on Marin and Southern Sonoma highways last night, according to the California Highway Patrol.

A 17-year-old Petaluma youth was killed when a car in which he was a passenger overturned on Petaluma Hill Drive just south of Yolanda Avenue in Petaluma.

And an unidentified man was fatally injured sometime during the night when his Volkswagen van plunged over an embankment on Panoramic Highway near the Mountain Home Inn in Mill Valley.

The Petaluma youth, Max Richard Moore, of 21 Myrtle Court, died shortly after he was taken to Memorial Hospital in Santa Rosa.

Driver of the vehicle, Robert F. Tresch, 17, of 1170 Walker Road, Petaluma, was reported in satisfactory condition at the hospital today with head cuts and a broken collar bone. Another passenger, Harvey Moss, 22, of 1802 Bodega Avenue, Petaluma, was treated for minor injuries at Santa Rosa's Community Hospital.

The California Highway Patrol reported the Tresch auto was southbound at a high rate of speed at 11:20 p.m. when it slid off the road, flipped several times and ejected all three youths.

Details were sketchy on the Panoramic Highway accident. The van was discovered about 8:45 p.m. by a troop of Boy Scouts hiking in the canyon area below the highway.

The highway patrol said the van, which had Colorado license plates, plunged off the road down a 150-foot cliff and smashed into a road at the bottom.

Officers believed the crash occurred sometime after dark last night, but could give no further details.

The Marin death was the 13th traffic fatility to date in the county this year, compared with 17 during the same period last year.

Deliberations End, Board Passes Big New Budget

The Marin County Board of Supervisors formally adopted a $47.3 million budget yesterday, ending eight days of deliberations.

While they proclaimed the document "too fat" when hearings began last week, the supervisors only trimmed about $100,000 from the recommended budget of County Administrator John F. Barrows.

Based on the adopted budget, County Auditor-Controller Michael Mitchell estimated the fiscal 1972-73 tax rate at $2.72 per $100 assessed valuation.

He said the tax rate would have been about three cents higher if a last-minute addition of some $200,000 in carryover funds from this year had not been made.

The extra funds, he continued, were found after reevaluating "end-of-the-year balances" from various county departments. About $1.5 million was carried over earlier.

The approved budget, meanwhile, is about $2 million more than that approved a year ago — thus eating up the carryover. It includes $700,000 for open space acquisition and $210,000 for a county jail honor farm.

Mitchell said taxpayers will pay about the same in taxes as this year even though the tax rate is about 17 cents less. The tax rate decrease is offset primarily by an average 6 per cent increase in assessed valuation.

Approval of the budget appeared touch and go at one point as supervisors weighed several items which remained in the budget despite split 2-2 votes during the hearings.

During the course of the hearings — not attended by Supervisor John F. McInnis because of ill health — supervisors found themselves divided sharply over several major issues, including the proposed honor farm for jail inmates.

Supervisor Peter R. Arrigoni

$25 Million Damage In Delta Flooding

ISLETON, Calif. (UPI)—The 3,000 victims of floods in the San Joaquin Valley took shelter in the homes of friends and emergency structures today while authorities met in waterlogged Isleton to work out how to keep residents away until health problems are overcome.

Damage estimates spiraled upwards—to perhaps as much as $25 million—as officials assessed the impact of the floods which put most of the town under water as deep as 10 feet after an emergency dike collapsed.

A handful of officials who stayed behind to keep an eye on the community of 1,300 people reported the situation now was "stable" with floods rising and falling with the tides.

State officials said it could take up to a year to drain off the disaster zone.

The Coast Guard reported a small number of persons received minor injuries when hundreds of workers were hurriedly evacuated as an emergency dike collapsed Thursday night.

"We just dropped everything and shagged out," said Tommy Ciaramitaro, a 17-year-old volunteer worker.

"It's all over. We lost," said Col. James C. Donovan of the Army Corps of Engineers.

Several dump trucks and other earth-moving equipment used in a 36-hour effort to build a 1 1-2-mile makeshift dike to save the town were later seen by aerial observers almost covered with water where they had been abandoned.

Coast Guard cutters hauled out 74 pleasure craft, before they, too, were pulled out leaving behind 10-15 other boats either sunk or in unreachable areas.

Flood waters flowed through a pickle factory, Isleton's principal industry, leaving processing tanks bobbing about on the surface.

$500,000 Skyjacker Gets Away

PERU, Ind. (UPI) — The bushy-haired young skyjacker of an American Airlines 727 jetliner bailed out early today in a rural area a few miles southeast of here. He was believed carrying more than $500,000 in ransom money.

More than 100 law enforcement officials combed the area searching for the unidentified hijacker.

"They are checking anything that they think doesn't belong there," said Dean Kemp, of the Indiana state police. "They are checking vehicles. They are checking every rock and tree. We have units assigned to every highway, state road and country road. We have instructions that he is dangerous."

"He bailed out in kind of a rugged area," said Vernal

SCENE CHANGES — San Quentin's big yard in 1965 (left photo) was a crowded scene. Today, a sunny afternoon finds a lone man carrying something across the vast space. The old institution, slated for closing in 1974 or 1975, has been reduced to 1,500 inmates from a high of 6,000 two decades ago.

San Quentin Slowly Fading Away

By MARY LEYDECKER

Sunlight pours dimly through broken windows and the only sound is birds flapping high up in the ceiling of the huge cellblock, once the home of 500 convicts but now five tiers of emptiness.

Out in the windswept yard, where men formerly jostled for breathing space, a couple of denim-clad inmates shuffle along quietly, carrying their belongings in cardboard boxes.

"No one actually believes it yet," San Quentin's information officer said about the old prison's scheduled demise in 1974 or 1975.

The victim of decay and changing times, San Quentin is due to be closed after more than a century of colorful, often violent history.

A tour inside the walls of the archaic fortress soon proves that San Quentin is dying — albeit with some dignity, as befits an institution which has long housed some of California's toughest men and is still the home of such as Sirhan Sirhan and Charles Manson.

The prison's population — which rose to more than 6,000 in the 1940s and 1950s — now stands at a mere 1,500, with more convicts leaving each day. "We know we'll be told to cut down to 1,200 by Jan. 1," said information officer Joseph P. O'Brien.

Under orders by the Department of Corrections to phase out California's oldest prison (founded in 1852), San Quentin officials daily transfer men to other institutions.

Inside the prison gate, men wearing white coveralls and carrying boxes full of their possessions quietly board a Department of Corrections bus for a heavily guard trip to another prison.

Asked the destination of a group of about 50 convicts aboard such a bus this week, O'Brien said, "All our people are going South," adding that the men were probably headed for Soledad or San Luis Obispo.

A guard opened the door leading into the main part of the prison and in a grubby little room more inmates sat waiting, holding their belongings.

Beyond this scene lies the heart of the prison, where gaudily colored flowers in immaculately tended gardens contrast, as they long have, with tiny, dark outmoded cells built in less humane times.

Here the emptiness of the huge facility becomes striking.

A convict in handcuffs followed by an officer treads down a path marked in white lines through the center of the yard — a path that has little meaning when no one else is in the yard.

Another guard unlocks the huge old South block, now completely cleared out and the home only of birds that fly in through broken windows.

O'Brien, a quiet-spoken man who has spent 18 years at San Quentin, explains that "some of our people have a penchant for breaking windows."

The cells in the old block seem incredibly tiny for one man, much less the two they housed for many years. The five rows of cells reach to the top of what amounts to a six-story building.

Much of the old prison, built like the warden's office in 1918 or in succeeding years, is beyond reasonable reapir, O'Brien said. The plumbing is in a complete state of collapse — partly because of the fact that, in earlier years, salt water was used and caused constant erosion.

"They just expected to replace the pipes from time to time, using convict labor," O'Brien said. Now, however, he

Bankers Meet

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Britain's decision to float the pound to let it find its own level on world money markets started a run on the dollar and prompted a hastily convened session in Paris today of European Common Market central bankers aimed at finding a solution to the new world money crisis.

The bankers, representing the six European Economic Community countries and four candidates — Britain, Ireland, Denmark and Norway — flew in for the meeting at the Bank of France.

Officials called the meeting Friday after Anthony Barber, British chancellor of the exchequer, announced in London that the pound would be freed from its official exchange rate of $2.60.

Okinawa Ballot

TOKYO (UPI) — Okinawans will cast their ballots Sunday in the first gubernatorial election since their island was returned to Japan after 27 years of U.S. occupation.

The outcome of the election will have no direct bearing on the existing relations between Japan and the United States. No matter who wins, the U.S. will continue to maintain more than 40,000 military personnel on Okinawa under the U.S.-Japan security treaty.

Loss To Reds

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — The Cambodian high command said today the government had apparently lost two positions to the Communists on Highway 1, about 35 miles southeast of Phnom Penh.

If confirmed, the government loss of the positions, under Communist pressure for the last four days, would be the first suffered by the government on the Phnom Penh-Saigon highway since Communist troops overran 60 miles of the road in April.

Brandt In East

BERLIN (UPI) — Willy Brandt traveled to West Berlin today by train, the first West German chancellor ever to do so.

Until today, Brandt and previous chancellors flew to the city.

Brandt was greeted at West Berlin's Zoo Station on his arrival by Mayor Klaus Schuetz.

Boat Battle

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Israeli and Arab guerrilla boats clashed in the Mediterranean Sea off Lebanon early today, and each side came out of the battle claiming victory.

The Al Fatah guerrilla organization said "four Israeli gunboats infiltrated Lebanese territorial waters heading toward the positions of our revolutionaries in the Rashidieh area who knocked one Israeli boat out of action."

Some hours later Israel issued a communique saying its gunboats sank an armed Arab guerrilla vessel off the Lebanese coast as "part of our battle against the terrorists."

Not A 'Purge'

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Communist party said today it is going to throw out many unworthy members in the next two years, but it does now want this confused with the dreaded "purges" of Josef Stalin's day.

Pravda, the Communist party newspaper, said in a front page editorial there would be a weeding out of shirkers and bad boys in 1973 and in 1974 through the technique of an exchange of party membership cards.

This means all party members must turn in their cards for new ones and afford the party the opportunity to review their credentials in the process.

Wallace Weakens

GRACEVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — George Wallace Jr. told a Wallace-for-president rally Friday night that his father's physical condition has weakened and acting Alabama Gov. Jere Beasley warned that the elder Wallace may have to bypass the Democratic National Convention.

It was the first time that anyone close to the governor had indicated that Wallace might be unable to attend the Miami Beach convention since he was the victim of an assassination attempt at a Laurel, Md., shopping center May 15.

"My father's physical condition at the present time is not as good as it has been the last few days," the younger Wallace told the crowd of about 1,200 persons.

Slaying Probe

CHICAGO (UPI) — Police Supt. James B. Conlisk Jr. has delivered an ultimatum to four Chicago policemen — cooperate with the FBI and the police internal investigations division in an investigation of the slayings of six black men or face the loss of their jobs.

It had been widely reported that the FBI was investigating several black policemen linked to the execution-style slayings of six black businessmen between September, 1971 and last February.

The FBI has refused to comment on the investigation and reports that the slayings were linked to a falling out among members of a narcotics ring.

No-Force Pledge

SEOUL (UPI) — South Korean President Park Chung-hee, pledging his government will never use force to settle the Korean problem, called on North Korea today to renounce force and violence.

In a message marking the 22nd anniversary of the outbreak of the Korean War on June 25, 1950, Park said the North Koreans have not abandoned their aggressive ambition against the South.

"Most unfortunately, we are still confronted with an unavoidable reality in which we cannot find any sign of change on the part of the North Korean Communists," Park said.

6 Murders In 2 Days —Police Undermanned

LONG BEACH (UPI)—The apparent ax murder of a 20-year-old Downey man brought to six the number of persons hacked, stabbed or beaten to death in the Long Beach-Compton area since Thursday. A seventh victim was stabbed 10 times late Friday night but lived.

Five of the murders were in this beach city, which has only an eight-man homicide detail. The sixth occurred in adjacent Compton.

Long Beach police said the latest victim, Raymond T. Sizemore, 30, was found lying on a sidewalk near his home about midnight, stabbed five times in the chest and five times in the back.

Sizemore lived to tell officers he was attacked by three or four men as he walked down a street 15 blocks from his home. He was in fair condition at a hospital.

Although the attacks have seemed to come all at once, police said there was no connection between the killings, which included one double murder, and three suspects have been arrested.

The last murder victim was Keith Bolla, 20, Downey, whose body was found in a vacant house in Compton Friday. Police said he apparently had been killed with an ax 12 to 18 hours earlier. There was evidence of a struggle, but officers said he had not been robbed.

Two 18-year-old youths were being questioned by Long Beach police for the slaying of security guard Michael Paul Kach, 61, on Thursday. He was stabbed and beaten while trying to capture two burglary suspects.

Ellis Breland, 32, was booked on suspicion of murder in the slayings of John Chadow Jr., 34, and Sandra Cole, 35, who were bludgeoned to death at their apartment. The murder weapon was believed to be a small pickax.

Still at large were two men who picked up hitchhikers Bill Pieresa, 22, and his halfbrother, Tim Carlswell, 23, both of Westminster, Calif. The men allegedly pulled a knife and fatally stabbed Carlswell during a robbery attempt. Pieresa managed to escape unharmed.

The sixth victim was Alex Edward Lewandoski, 44, who was found lying in a street here Friday with eight stab wounds in his chest.

Supermart Food Prices Rising Again

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Agriculture Department reports that food prices in supermarkets increased in May following two months of decline.

The government food price report was issued Friday as the Price Commission scheduled an unusual meeting at noon Sunday to consider clamping a 30-day freeze on retail meat prices.

The Agriculture Department's "market basket" index of food prices rose 0.4 per cent in May following declines of 0.7 per cent in April and 0.4 per cent in March. Government officials say the increase in May would have been higher except for price cutbacks by middlemen.

The increase was attributed mainly to higher retail prices for pork, fresh vegetables and fruit.

Beef prices fell during May but started to increase sharply as the month ended, the department said.

Price Commission Chairman C. Jackson Grayson called the Sunday meeting after polling the six other members of his panel by telephone Friday to sound out their reaction to a meat price freeze. The Commission's recommendation for a freeze was by-passed by the Cost of Living Council Thursday.

The prospects for a freeze, however, were seen by some sources as slight following President Nixon's disclosure Thursday that he was considering hiking meat import quotas to increase supply and bring down prices.

Nixon also said he would not rule out elimination of the price control exemption that raw agriculture products have enjoyed since the start of the wage-price freeze last August.

Summit Forecast

NEW DELHI (UPI) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi said today she expects no "far-reaching or immediate results" from the India-Pakistan summit which starts Wednesday at Simla.

Humphrey Warns Of GOP Takeover

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey warned the Democratic Platform Committee today that a Republican majority could result in American politics if a "narrow, ideological elite" takes control of the Democratic party.

Humphrey used no names in the written speech submitted to the committee which is dominated by backers of Sen. George S. McGovern, the frontrunner for the Democratic presidential nomination, who was not scheduled to testify.

Warning that the party stands "in the most precarious position since the days of Franklin Roosevelt," Humphrey said the Republican opposition is feeding upon the "frustrations of the American people (and) stands ready and actively poised to decimate the Democratic coalition."

"If the Democratic party," Humphrey said, "falls into the hands of any narrow, ideological elite; if it focuses its concern on matters of interest to only a hendful of the privileged or if it neglects the day-to-day concerns of the many, then the long and scrupulously planned 'emerging Republican majority' may well be upon us."

Humphrey said he has spent "a lifetime fighting the forces of reaction in this country, and I will fight with all my strength to prevent this from happening. We have all fought too long and hard for progress and human dignity in America to allow this country to be enveloped by the forces of reaction, racism and privilege."

The warning from Humphrey, who was unable to attend the platform meeting because of a schedule conflict, was submitted to the 150-member panel in a lengthy written speech. Each presidential candidate was invited to appear before the committee working out policy positions to be submitted to the National Convention in Miami Beach in July, but none of the three top contenders attended.

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, in a statement, said Democrats must "go into the general election campaign a unified party." He called for a platform and a party position which would "reflect the moderation that I believe to be the consensus of the American people."

Rep. Shirley A. Chisholm, D-N.Y., said the Democratic party must "shake off the old custodial type of liberalism with its litany of welfare projects, its stress on numerical quantitative aspects of problems and politics, and its self-styled pragmatists, contemptuous of those who challenge the familiar routine of power politics and Main Street wisdom."

She said the party must further open the political process so that people have a sense of participation and a knowledge they are affecting "if only in a small way, the forces that control their lives."

Aides said McGovern was too exhausted to come. Humphrey was attending a nephew's wedding in Minneapolis.

Professor Named

BERKELEY (UPI) — Cheri Gaines, assistant professor of law at The University of San Francisco, has been named acting city attorney of Berkeley.

Budget Cut Override 'Remote'

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —State employes, Democratic lawmakers and one Republican legislator are unhappy with Gov. Ronald Reagan's cuts in the state budget, but the Senate GOP leader says an override of the governor's vetoes is "extremely remote."

Reagan signed the record $7.7 billion budget after trimming $258 million from the spending proposal sent to him by the legislature.

An attempt to overrride the budget cuts would have to be launched in the Senate because the budget bill was authored by a member of that house.

But Senate Republican leader Fred Marler Jr. of Redding said Friday the possibility of a successful override was "extremely remote."

Twenty-seven votes are needed to override a veto in the Senate, and Democrats hold a 21-19 majority. The Assembly also would have to approve the override by a two-thirds vote.

One Republican lawmaker upset the predictable party line reaction Friday to Reagan's blue pencil action.

Sen. John A. Nejedly, RWalnut Creek, said he was attempting to determine how much support there would be for an effort by him to override Reagan's veto of about $750,000 for improved training and recruitment of prison correctional officers.

Budget Compromise In Sausalito Is Adopted

In a compromise action, the Sausalito City Council last night adopted a $1,776,646 budget for 1972-73, but also asked city department heads to try to pare their individual budgets.

"We are asking each department head, if at all possible, to trim 5 per cent from his budget," Mayor Robin Sweeny reported.

The council action was the result of a complaint from Councilman Evert Heynneman that the department chiefs had padded their proposed budgets for 1972-73.

If the trimming can be done, Mrs. Sweeny said the budget may be altered at a later date. Under Heynneman's plan, about $88,000 resulting from the cuts would be placed in a reserve fund to be used "if and when the department heads can prove it is needed."

The budget is approximately $3,000 less than this year's $1,779,187 spending program and will leave unchanged Sausalito's current tax rate of $1.485 per $100 assessed valuation, according to City Mgr. Albert St. Cyr.

Included in the budget is $101,644 in capital improvements, including resurfacing of city tennis courts, water main improvements, installation of a traffic signal at Bridgeway and Napa Street and a median strip on Bridgeway from Coloma Street to the north city limits.

Other projects planned are repairs to a municipal fishing pier and resurfacing of municipal parking lots 2 and 3.

The spending program for next year also includes these major expenditures: police, $465,717; fire, $342,702; street and subdrain maintenance, $178,828; parks, $46,375; library, $71,631; street construction, $17,920 and planning $25,910.

BUDGET

suggested that the items be taken up again in an effort to reduce the tax rate further.

Supervisors Arnold M. Baptiste and Michael Wornum, who found themselves opposing Arrigoni and Supervisor Louis H. Baar on issues, protested the action as "bad-faith budgeting."

"Both sides have won some and lost some," said Wornum, adding little would be served by reopening the hearings.

After two split votes to adopt the budget (three affirmative votes are required), an embittered Baptiste proclaimed: "We're playing politics so let's keep playing," as he urged several capital improvement projects be reconsidered.

Wornum then was joined by Baar in urging the document be adopted.

Following removal of a $55-per-month salary increase for supervisors, the board voted 4-0 to adopt the spending program.

Earlier during yesterday's session, supervisors approved increasing the planning department's staff from the present 24 employees to 26 as requested by Planning Director Werner Von Gundell.

The two new planners will be used primarily to work with community groups seeking to draft new master plans for their communities. A recommendation from Barrows that only one be added brought a storm of complaint from residents.

The planning department's total approved budget was $475,000 — an increase of about $30,000 over 1971-72.

The board also unanimously approved increasing rates charged to parents with children in foster homes an average of 24 per cent.

At issue was whether the foster home program might be beefed up, thus reducing the need for the new children's treatment center at Juvenile Hall.

The board, which had deferred the matter at Wednesday's session on projected welfare spending, agreed that the two were not directly related and thus let the $300,000 treatment center program stand.

New rates to foster parents will be $115 per month for children under 6, an increase of $16; $140 for children 7 to 12, an increase of $29; $160 for boys and girls 13 to 17, an increase of $29 and $36, respectively.

Other departments approved yesterday with only minor revisions included: agricultural commissioner, $145,000 (up $10,000 from this year); weights and measures, $74,000 (up $5,000); farm advisor, $23,000 (up $2,000); county pound, $367,000 (down $1,000); balanced transportation $62,000 (down $7,000); county recorder $171,000 (up $12,000), and reserves $50,000 (down $700,000).

Bark Worse Than Bite In Sausalito

The barks of Sausalito city officials are worse than their bites, Sausalito poet-publisher Milton Weiner discovered last night.

Weiner's benefit for his literary magazine, The Suspicious Humanist, went off without a hitch even though Sausalito officialdom had forbidden the event.

Approximately 75 persons attended the benefit, a poetry and music fete, held at the Poop Deck Restaurant on Bridgeway in defiance of city ordinances which prohibit live entertainment in most restaurants.

Neither city officials — nor policemen — appeared at the event.

"I feel I have more important things to think about," City Mgr. Albert St. Cyr said today to explain why the city did not move last night to enforce its ordinance. "In fact, I'd say that benefit was the least of my worries."

Weiner was still counting the receipts this morning and could not say how much money had been raised for the small magazine.

EOC

EOC, which presented a so-called "work program" showing an operating budget of $113,000 — $90,000 of which would have gone to salaries.

"I can honestly say the program leaves me cold," said County Administrator John F. Barrows, who said it was a "program for a non-program."

The work program called for the troubled agency to act as a catalyst to promote expanded services from other social agencies.

It was drafted by consultant Benjamin I. Young of Belvedere at a cost of more than $5,000 and has been heralded as proof of the agency's new direction.

"It would be unfortunate to eliminate the EOC," said Barrows, if only because its "present program won't offer too much constructively."

Supervisor Michael Wornum responded that the "20 pages of gobbledygook" submitted by the poverty agency amounted to a "rip-off" of the taxpayers since it offered nothing but high salaries.

Wornum and Supervisor Louis H. Baar said they couldn't support the program outlined in Young's report since it called for "urging others to do the job they're already doing."

"I'd like to see Head Start continue but I'm not receptive to continuing the EOC," agreed Chairman Peter R. Arrigoni. "They're proposing a duplication of services."

Alfred Conklin III, new executive director of the poverty agency, said he believed it was unfair to burden the EOC now with itu problems (and reputation) of the past.

"This is no longer the same EOC that we all knew and loved," he said although acknowledging that the work program had been awkwardly written.

Conklin sought to justify spending $90,000 for staff by saying it was needed to oversee use of funds that would be acquired for other agencies as well as the Head Start program.

At that point, the board was informed by Deputy County Counsel George Silvestri that he had been told by federal officials thate was no legal reason the preschool program couldn't be funded through another agency.

After further give and take with members of the EOC board, supervisors directed County Administrator Barrows to investigate putting Head Start under another agency or possibly the board of supervisors itself.

In related action, the board deducted $12,100 from the $40,000 originally set aside for the EOC and allocated it to the Legal Aid Society, which EOC started several years ago.

The remaining $28,900 the board left frozen in its budget pending final placement of Head Start. In its action, approved on a 3-1 vote with Supervisor Arnold M. Baptiste dissenting, the board told Barrows to review any proposal from the EOC if it could reduce its staff to one person and become a "paper agency" to oversee Head Start.

County Planners Meet Monday

The Marin County Planning Commission, meeting at 9 a.m. Monday at the Civic Center, will consider approval of Unit 5 of the Marinview subdivision in Tamalpais Valley.

Neighbors of the proposed project have objected on the grounds of increased traffic, poor soil conditions and aesthetics.

The planning department staff is recommending approval of the project, to include 14 single-family residences and 32 townhouses.

Petaluma Council Hopes To Hold Down Budget

The Petaluma City Council hopes to hold the city's $4.1 million 1972-73 budget within existing revenues, Mayor Helen Putnam reported today.

During four-hour budget workshop yesterday, councilmen generally agreed to delay consideration of a proposed new utility tax or other income sources until they learn more about the prospects of federal and state revenue sharing, Mrs. Putnam said.

No votes were taken on any of the budget items reviewed, but there was consensus on solving the city library's overcrowding problem by using part of the city hall basement for storage. A proposed new $4,200 elevator for books was held in abeyance, as was any decision on proposals to join the county library system, the Mayor reported.

Councilmen also reviewed Petaluma promotional events such as the wrist-wrestling competition, annual parade for the Sonoma Marin Fair and chamber of commerce programs. General agreement was that the events deserved city support, Mrs. Putnam said.

Councilmen also agreed that the city should forgo new blinds in the older wing of city hall, and additional furniture for the council's conference room, at least until next year.

Funds should be left in the capital outlay budget — but on an uncommitted basis — for development of the city-owned former community church, until the city recreation director and Petaluma civic and cultural organizations recommend a program for the building's uses, the council agreed.

Mayor Putnam said the council would hold an action session on the budget at a special meeting at 3 p.m. July 6 in the city hall.

FLOODS

High School and talked to flood victims.

"We saw devastation everywhere," Nixon told Kline. He said he was most concerned about houses for the victims and either putting the area's steel plants back in operation or finding new industry for Harrisburg.

Sunbury, where a family of four drowned, still faced the "most crucial" test, officials said. The east and west branches of the Susquehanna merge there.

Residents were evacuated this morning from towns on both the Ohio and West Virginia sides of the Ohio River as the floodwaters in Western Pennsylvania rolled into the river, posing what was described as a "major' threat to the Wheeling area in West Virginia's northern panhandle.

By midday the river was five feet over flood level and flooding was reported in the Ohio towns of Martins Ferry, East Liverpool and Bellaire and the Wheeling Downs Race Track was covered by 6 feet of water.

The 7,000 residents of Wheeling Island in the middle of the river also were evacuated from the island which is expected to be completely flooded when the river crests Sunday morning at an expected 48 feet, 11 feet over flood level.

A force of 17,000 workers lost a desperate bid to save the downtown section of Wilkes-Barre when floodwaters on the Susquehanna's west branch pushed through sandbag barriers, sending them fleeing to higher ground.

The Ohio River crested at Pittsburgh at 5 a.m. at 35.82 feet, short of the predicted 37 feet but still high enough to flood parts of the downtown area.

The Golden Triangle where the Allegheny and Monongahela rivers meet to form the Ohio was submerged and narrow arms of water reached toward the Hilton Hotel.

PRISON

said, "everything is by contract," and the inmates "watch through holes" when construction projects are undertaken.

In contrast to the empty old cell block are the prison's newer and remodeled buildings. "It's hard to imagine tearing these down," O'Brien said, gesturing at the chapel building.

Inside, the huge Protestant chapel was empty on the weekday afternoon and the only sound was a tune being picked out on a piano in another room.

The dining room, another modern-looking facility with bright murals decorating the walls, is not empty these days, officers explained, but feeding which used to take twice as long now is accomplished in 45 minutes.

(Another dining room is used now only for entertainment.)

In the industrial section of the prison, the scene is again one of quiet. A few men are working in the furniture factory where trim and comfortable furniture for state institutions iu made.

The cotton textile mill and the clothing factory are closed, however, and a truck rounded the corner with the last load of mattresses from the mattress factory. The factory closed this week.

The peaceful scene at the old institution is somewhat misleading, however, according to Warden Louis S. Nelson, who plans to retire in 1974, "before the ship goes down."

The few men now being assigned to San Quentin are among the toughest in the state prison system, he said. "Of 11 we received this week, we could only put two into the general prison population."

The rest, all with histories of trouble-making at other institutions, will be part of the prison's constantly locked up men — who now number about 85.

Since the bloody violence at the prison last August in which six persons died, additional security, especially in regard to visitors to the institution, has been undertaken.

"We couldn't stand another August," Nelson said, although he added that with a higher percentage of troublesome convicts coming to the prison, he fears violence.

As for the future of San Quentin, state officials still haven't decided whether it will be torn down and the property sold, the institution turned into a facility such as a prison psychiatric center, or some other plan followed.

"We haven't any immediate plans to tear down buildings there, mainly because it costs money to tear stuff down," Department of Corrections spokesman Philip D. Guthrie said.

State officials are studying maximum-security prison problems before plans for San Quentin or a replacement facility are made, he said.

In the meantime, the old prison, so long a part of the Marin scene, quietly but colorfully awaits its fate.

HIJACK

Baugh, Howard County deputy sheriff dispatcher in Kokomo. Baugh said the hijacker, believed to be armed, "has not been sighted at this time" nor has his parachute.

He left the plane without harming any of the six hostages after first being helped into a parachute. The plane, which had been cleared to fly to Toronto, continued on to Canada after the jump. It later returned safely to Chicago's O'Hare Airport.

The Federal Aviation Administration gave the official time of the jump as 3:53 a.m. EDT. Authorities at first thought the man had bailed out seven miles west of Kokomo, but after interviewing the pilot upon his return to Chicago, it was determined that the jump was made near Peru.

FBI agents searched the grounded plane at O'Hare International Airport in Chicago for clues to the identity of the hijacker. Observers told UPI they saw agents remove an Army jacket from the plane and a piece of clothing from the plane's tail section.

OBITUARIES

Robert Zappetini Dies At 54

Robert (Sonny) Zappetini, San Rafael businessman and member of a pioneer Marin County family, died yesterday in a local hospital.

He became ill early this weekwhile on an outing near Boonville, Mendocino County, with the Sonoma Trail Blazers horsemen's group, his family reported. He was 54.

Zappetini founded the Sun Iron Works on Francisco Boulevard 12 years ago, and operated it to the time of his death. Previously he had worked with other members of the family in the Steve Zappetini and Son Iron Works on Second Street, founded by his father.

Zappetini was past president of Mount Tamalpais Parlor 64, Native Sons of the Golden West, the Tamalpais Trail Riders, the Sonoma Trail Blazers and the Frontier Boys.

He was born and educated in San Rafael.

Zappetini's paternal grandfather, John Baptiste Zappetini, arrived in Marin County from Italy in 1861, wed Mary Powell in the chapel of St. Vincent's School, and settled in Ross Valley. He was responsible for planting the huge eucalyptus trees still standing in the Dominican area of San Rafael from seeds imported by his employer, William T. Coleman of San Francisco, according to Marin County historians.

Zappetini's mother, Mary (May) Pareto Zappetini, still lives in the Steven Zappetini home on Second Street, built before the 1906 earthquake. She served on the San Rafael Planning Commission in the late 1950s.

Zappetini also is survived by a son, Matthew Zappetini of San Rafael; a brother, Steven Zappetini Jr. of San Rafael; and five sisters, Mignon Detmayer of San Quentin Village, Eleanor Fritz of Redwood City, Hazel Pierachini of Sausalito and Grace Osborne and Doris Hagey of San Rafael.

Mount Tamalpais Parlor 64, Native Sons of the Golden West, will hold services at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the Harry M. Williams Mortuary, San Rafael, followed at 8 p.m. by recitation of the rosary.

Mass of the Resurrection will be celebrated at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday in St. Raphael's Church. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery, San Rafael.

The family prefers memorial contributions to a favorite charity.

MRS. HAYDEN

Funeral for Lillian F. Hayden, a longtime Marin resident, has been held in Mill Valley.

Mrs. Hayden, of Mill Valley, died Tuesday in a local hospital after a long illness. She was 76.

She was a native of Idaho and had lived in California since 1900. For the past 47 years, she had been a resident of Marin County.

Mrs. Hayden was a member of Our Lady of Mount Carmel Catholic Church.

Survivors include her sister, Mae Frazier and her brother, Chester Davis.

W. NOVAK

Walter Novak of Cotati, a leader in the Petaluma Jewish community, died yesterday in a Marin hospital after a long illness. He was 73.

A native of Poland, Novak came to the U.S. 53 years ago and to Sonoma County in 1934. He resided at 10621 Minnesota Avenue.

Until his retirement seven years ago, he was a poultry rancher.

Novak was a member and past president of the Petaluma Jewish Community Center, secretary of the Jewish Community Council, executive director of the Labor Zionist Organization and a past director of the Petaluma Community Concert Association.

He is survived by his wife, Helen; a son, Clement Novak of Oakland; a daughter Delia Schletter of Berkeley, and three grandchildren.

Graveside services will be at 11:30 a.m. tomorrow at B'nai Israel Cemetery in Petaluma.

MRS. HESTER

Private funeral was held yesterday for Lisa Bell Hester, longtime Marin County resident.

She was the widow of the late Sid Hester, onetime deputy director of public works for San Francisco and sporting events promoter before World War I. He died in 1958.

Mrs. Hester died Wednesday in a local convalescent home after a lengthy illness.

She was born in The Dalles, Ore., but her family brought her to the Bay Area as an infant.

The Hesters moved to San Anselmo in 1941.

Mrs. Hester is survived by her daughter, Helen Hester, a resident of San Quentin Village and secretary to Warden Louis S. Nelson of San Quentin Prison.

Burial was in Cypress Lawn, Colma.

The Whites' 50th Year

When Charles White was a student at San Quentin Grammar School the teacher punished him and made him sit next to Gertrude Gillette.

Today, nearly 65 years later, Charles and Gertrude — she became Mrs. White on June 24, 1922 — are celebrating their 50th wedding anniversary.

Gertrude Gillette was born in Eureka. Her family moved to Marin in 1907 when her uncle, James N. Gillette, was governor of California. Governor Gillette gave her father, his brother, the job of distribution officer at San Quentin.

Charles White's father was also employed at San Quentin. The two attended grammar school and high school together, when San Rafael High School was located on E Street, and more or less took each other for granted, according to Mrs. White, until they were adults.

She attended San Francisco Normal School, now California State University, San Francisco, and was teaching at San Quentin Grammar School when they began to appreciate one another.

Following their marriage at the home of a minister in San Francisco, the couple lived in San Quentin, although Mr. White was working for Marin Municipal Water District. They moved to San Rafael in 1932 and lived there until Clinton Duffy became warden of San Quentin Prison in 1940 and asked Mr. White to work for him as administrative assistant and associate warden. He worked there until retiring in 1963, except for five years when he was employed at Soledad Prison. They moved to their present home in San Rafael when Mr. White retired.

Friends from grammar school days and some students of Mr. White were among the 130 guests who attended a reception in the couple's honor this afternoon hosted by their daughters, Mrs. Joseph Cowan of Fremont and Mrs. William Eads of Salinas. Also at the reception were the Whites' grandchildren, Mrs. Lawrence Bettencourt of Daly City, mother of their three great-grandchildren, and Charles and Diane Eads, the Whites' young grandchildren.

The Whites enjoy traveling, especially taking short trips in California.

"We are always traveling, going somewhere," Mrs. White said, "and we enjoy our garden. We're definitely not the rocking-chair type."

Mr. White is a past president of Mount Tamalpais Parlor, Native Sons of the Golden West. He also has been a member of the Masons and Eastern Star and is now active in the Sons in Retirement and a retired government and state employees' group.

Mrs. White has been a member of Eastern Star for 51 years.

THE CHARLES Whites of San Rafael look through a book compiled by their daughter, Mrs. Joseph Cowan of Fremont. The gold leaf book has photographs of highlights of the Whites' 50 years of marriage and pictures of their ancestors who came to California in the 1890s. Mrs. Cowan and the Whites' other daughter, Mrs. William Eads of Salinas, hosted a reception in their parent's honor this afternoon at Deer Park Villa in Fairfax. (Independent-Journal photo)

Maple Lawn Is Setting For Wedding

At a ceremony at Maple Lawn in San Rafael Laurie Foster of Novato became the bride of Grant Jones of Modesto on June 17.

Laurie was attended by Shirley Bomio of Novato as maid of honor and Sharon Bomio of Novato and Judy Pincin of McCloud as bridesmaids.

Robert Winters of Ripon served as best man for Grant. Guests were seated by Jere Johnson of Novato and Elden Heersink of Modesto.

The reception also was held at Maple Lawn, and the couple left afterward for a Lake Tahoe wedding trip.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Foster of Novato and the sister of Mrs. Jim Ladis of Napa and Rodger Foster of Pleasanton.

Laurie is a Novato High School graduate and also graduated from Fresno State College. She will return to college for a teaching credential.

Grant is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Billie Jones of Modesto. He was graduated from Grace Davis High School and Fresno State College. He is an agriculture instructor at Lodi High School. Mrs. Brian Heath of Bakersfield and Mrs. James Bates of Sonora are his sisters.

Coalition To Seek Equal Rights Bill

A coalition of women's groups will assemble on the steps of the Capitol in Sacramento Tuesday at noon for a mass meeting to urge senators to ratify the equal rights amendment to the U. S. Constitution.

Women from the National Organization for Women, the Business and Professional Women's Swomen's Clubs and the American Association of University Women are spearheading the meeting at the capitol.

Women from the Marin County Chapter of the National Organization for Women are planning to leave Marin at 10 a.m. for the Sacramento rally.

Marin Chapter of NOW said that the coalition has been urging senators to sign the discharge petition to force the ratification resolution AJR 17 out of committee for a vote on the senate floor, a procedure rarely used. To date, 20 other states have ratified the amendment and ratification has been voted by California's Assembly.

Shelley M. Reynolds Is Engaged

Shelley M. Reynolds' engagement to Edward F. Gazzano of Huntington Beach has been announced by Shelley's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John C. Reynolds of Huntington Beach.

Edward is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred W. Gazzano of San Rafael.

Shelley is the sister of Jack, Kerry, Michael, Jeanette and Andrea Reynolds of Huntington Beach. She is a graduate of Marina High School and is a student at Golden West College, both in Huntington Beach. She is employed with J. C. Penney Co. in that city.

Edward, the brother of Mrs. David Martin of Novato, graduated from Marin Catholic High School, College of Marin and California State University, Long Beach. He is employed also with J. C. Penney Co. in Huntington Beach.

The couple plans to be married June, 1973.

ON THE AGENDA

Work With Handicapped Persons And Seniors Will Be Described

Their work with handicapped persons and senior citizens will be described by the two featured speakers at the dinner meeting of the Marin County Business and Professional Women at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Peggy Hopkins, home economist for Pacific Gas and Electric Co., will speak about the program, "cooking with a handicap," which she gave for Marin County handicapped adults from the Easter Seal Society in Marin. The other speaker will be Nancy Person, supervisor of the Community Recreation Center for the City of San Rafael, who works with the Goldenaires, a senior citizens group.

The dinner and meeting will be held at the Pathfinders Tea Room at the Marin Art and Garden Center in Ross.

Elsie Mazzini is program chairman, assisted by Juanita Gunderson.

A SALAD luncheon will be served by Court St. Agnes, Catholic Daughters of America, Wednesday at St. Rita's parish hall in Fairfax. A social hour will begin at 11:30 a.m. followed by the luncheon at 12:30 p.m.

Winifred Alten is chairman, and Jessie Sullivan is reservations chairman for the luncheon. MEMBERS OF the San Francisco Yacht Club in Belvedere will have a dinner at the club from 6 to 10 p.m. Thursday. Olympic yachting eliminations and a flag-raising ceremony will be held at 7 p.m. and the 12th Naval District band will play.

The club also will be open for breakfast, luncheon and dinner on the July 4 holiday.

MEMBERS OF the Non-Commissioned Officers Wives Club of Hamilton Air Force Base will tour Fisherman's Wharf and Chinatown in San Francisco on Tuesday.

Car pools will be formed at the NCO Club at 10 a.m. Members will take the ferry from Tiburon dock and have lunch and shop in Chinatown.

MARIN COUNTY Chapter of the National Society for Autistic Children will hold its monthly meeting at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at room 332, Civic Center, San Rafael. Mrs. Kimberly Gund of Novato is chairman.

MEMBERS OF World Wings international, Inc., are having a silent auction at their meeting Wednesday at 7:45 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Frank Myers in Belvedere.

Proceeds from the fund-raising event will go to the charity of former Pan American Airline stewardesses, the Nancy Fund for mentally retarded persons at Capa State Hospital.

Reservations chairmen are Mmes. Robert F. MacKay of Ignacio and Richard Hamann of Mill Valley.

Some Tips On How To Cut Food Costs

WASHINGTON (UPI) —How to help cut the food bill: "If possible and if you have the time, bypass prepared foods. Frozen dinners, fancy frozen vegetables, readymade desserts or easy-to-fix casserole items may be convenient, but you have to pay for the convenience. By preparing these items, you can save on your food bill."

The tip is from Virginia Knauer, director of the U.S. Office of Consumer Affairs. It was given in a recent issue of her "Consumer News" which comes out twice a month.

'Navel Battle' Can Be Settled If A Bit Of Foliage Is Used

HELEN AND SUE:

We're doing a mural as a summer art project. It's "The History of Man." I'm assigned Adam and Eve. Could you tell me please: did they have navels? Somebody said they weren't born of women, so they wouldn't need them. — ARTIST

DEAR ARTIST:

Michelangelo thought "Yes," other artists thought "No." God alone knows. — HELEN

ARTIST:

This navel battle can be settled with an olive branch — painted over the point in question. (Or whatever kind of foliage they had back then.) — SUE

RAP:

We were talking about pollution the other day and we got to thinking: What would happen if every kind of motor or machine-run vehicle (cars, trains, buses, planes, trucks, etc.) were banned for a year? Or somebody said "Zap!" and they stopped running?

Would we all die or would we somehow make it? — WHATIFFER

WHATIFFER:

That's a great idea for a science fiction novel. If I had the answer I might try writing it. — HELEN

NOTE FROM SUE:

My mother never told me advice columning would be like this. Next question please? — SUE

SUE AND HELEN:

I have a hard time finding a guy because I'm not very popular. Tony, who is 21, asked me out, and I guess I was grateful or something. I'd never been a pushover before but we ended up in his apartment. Now that I realize how wrong I was, I want to break up, but he says "No."

He says if I don't keep on with him he'll spread the word around town that I am an easy make, so I'm going with him to save my reputation . . . while losing it.

If my parents find out, they'll never trust me again. (They think Tony's a great guy now.) Since he's threatened me, I almost hate him, and I can't go on being used, but I'm scared of what will happen when he spreads the "news" all over town. — 16 AND SCARED

"16" AND SCARED:

Tell him two can play his little game: if Tony spreads the "news," then you will spread the truth — and what girl would chance dating a blackmailer? And mention casually that the first person you'll tell will be your father. — SUE

DEAR 16:

Two little words will stop this louse: statutory rape. He's 21 — an adult; you're a minor. If he doesn't want to be a non-paying guest of the state, he'd better beg you to keep quiet. — HELEN

DEAR RAP:

With all this talk of women's liberation, it appears we're progressing backwards. There were 19 women in Congress 10 years ago, two of them senators, the rest representatives. Today we have just one woman senator, and only 11 women in the House . . . and there's not one woman governor.

Meanwhile, (mostly male) state legislatures refuse to ratify the Equal Rights Amendment, and keep rigid anti-abortion laws on the books.

The few women in Congress have done outstanding jobs. Why don't we at home persuade more qualified women to run for office — and vote for them? — COLLEGE GIRL

DEAR COLLEGE:

We should; and we could put our candidates in office — for women hold 53 per cent of the vote.

Here's another of my "out-on-a-limb" predictions: by 1980 I believe we'll have at least 100 women in Congress. — HELEN

Got a problem? Or a subject for discussion, two-generation style? Direct your questions to either Sue or Helen Bottel — or both, in care of the Independent-Journal, if you want a combination mother-daughter answer.

SEW SIMPLE

Widen Sleeves For Fuller Elbow Room

By EUNICE FARMER

DEAR EUNICE,

My arms are rather fleshy at the elbow. My long sleeves never seem to have enough room for my arm when the arm is bent. Is there any way to allow for extra room without distorting the sleeve?

Mrs. R.R.W.

DEAR MRS. R.R.W.:

This is not a very difficult adjustment. Mark a line through your pattern from the shoulder at the cap of the sleeve down to the end of the sleeve. Extend the line from the center of your underarm dart to this vertical line. Cut both lines. Pin your pattern to another piece of paper, keeping the uncut section straight.

By spreading the dart, you will find you have also widened the sleeve at the elbow area. It will automatically spread the right amount simply by keeping the pattern flat. When it is spread the correct amount, pin this to your paper and you will have a new sleeve pattern for this and any future garment.

DEAR EUNICE,

My greatest difficulty is knowing how to tack the facings for the neckline and the armhole when my dresses are unlined.

MARY M.

DEAR MARY M.:

Glad you brought this up. This is one detail that if not properly done, will certainly make your garment look homemade. First, be sure you have graded the facing seam, and clipped any curved seamline clear to the stitching line to release the fabric and prevent pulling. Then,understitch the facing. This is done by bringing all the seams toward the facing itself and machine stitching very close to the seam on the facing. This will not show from the right side of the garment because the stitching will actually appear on the facing.

Lastly, tack the facing to the shoulder and the underarm seams only. If all the other steps have been completed properly, it won't be necessary to tack the facing down all around the outer edges. It is virtually impossible to avoid the tell-tale stitches if you do. In knits, there is often a decorative top stitching done about one-half inch from the finished seamline which will also guarantee the facing stays in place.

TAILOR TRIX WINNER

Mrs. Edward Temholder, St. Louis, is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her following sewing suggestion:

When a coat or dress has a gathered sleeve with a tight cuff, sew the button on the cuff with elastic thread. This way there is just enough "give" to enable you to put your hand through the cuff and not have to open the button each time you put it on or take it off.

DEAR EUNICE,

I would like to make a straight skirt with bordered fabric. Is there any way to eliminate the side seams, which would detract from the design? Also, the simple way to make this skirt would be with a gathered waistline. However, I can't wear all that bulk and fullness at the waist. How would I go about the construction of this type of skirt?

MRS. R.Y.

DEAR MRS. R.Y.:

First, select a border print that you will be cutting on the cross-grain. Select a straight skirt pattern, the side seams must be absolutely straight from the hip line down.

Place the two skirt sections with the side seams directly over each other, from the hip line to the hem. From the hip line to the waist, the pattern will separate leaving room for a curved dart. When you stitch the dart for the smooth hip line you desire be sure to taper to a fine point at the lower end of the dart to eliminate a pucker or bulge. You may also stitch the original darts of your pattern, or use them open and gather this small amount of excess fabric. The only seam for your skirt will be the center back seam where your zipper will be applied.

This type of skirt will not be satisfactory for a long skirt. There will not be enough fullness for you to walk unless you leave a long, open slit at the center back seam. If you intend to do this, be sure to allow an extra 2 inches at the center back seam when cutting to give you a fold-back facing for the open slit.

Eunice Farmer provides easy-tofollow instructions for one of the more difficult operations in dressmaking in her illustrated booklet, "All About Sleeves." If you would like to have her booklet, send 10 cents and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request for it to her in care of the Independent-Journal.

Marin Lambda Unit Has New President

Mrs. Chester C. Vargas of Belvedere, a member of the Marin Lambda unit of the National Association of Parliamentarians for more than a year, is its new president.

MRS. CHESTER VARGAS
Belvedere resident

The purpose of the group, she explained, is the study and teaching of philosophy and principles underlying rules of deliberating in assemblies. The objective is to further the growing interest in parliamentary rules and procedures in schools and organizations.

The new president said Lambda unit is planning to expand the scope of the organization by sponsoring classes in parliamentary procedures. Any woman who is a member of the National Association of Parliamentarians is eligible to join.

Mrs. Vargas also is state education director for the California Federation of Republican Women and is president of the San Francisco Council of Republican Women. Har activities in Marin have included serving as secretary to the 1969 Marin County Grand Jury and as chairman of its education committee.

A native of California, Verna Vargas was educated in Califrnia schools and is a graduate of Kensington Heights School for Girls in Southern California.

She and her husband, a management consultant, have lived in Marin for 17 years. They have no children.

In addition to politics, her interests are gardening, and breeding and training German shepherd dogs.

Other new officers are Mmes. Albert Heston, vice president; Conrad T. Kett, secretary, and Edwin F. Gardiner, treasurer.

Home Mechanics Forum Is Offered

NEW YORK (UPI) —Feminist Forums in New York recently offered women one-day home mechanics workshops. The basic course covered carpentry, electricity, plumbing and power tools.

The workshops were taught by Florence Adams who, worried about the high cost of renting space for herself and her two children, bought and rebuilt a brownstone. Ms. Adams stressed the practical approach to problem-solving and how to avoid the high cost of outside help.

Survival Struggle For Twin Fawns

Twin fawns, orphaned Tuesday morning when their mothers was killed by dogs, are struggling for survival in the hills above Larkspur, according to the city's police chief, Howard H. Clark.

A deer was found dead Tuesday on the patio of Betty Bissattini's home on Murray Avenue in Larkspur, and Larkspur police were called to catch a large St. Bernard-mix dog near the carcass.

The dog — which had been chewing the dead deer — was caught by police and tied up until taken away by the Marin County Humane Society.

But Clark said he recognized the deer immediately. He and his wife had fed her at their Escalle Avenue home for more than a year. "Just five weeks ago she began bringing her twin babies with her at feeding times," he said. "She was so proud of them, one light, one dark."

Since the deer's death, the orphan twins sometimes call at the Clarks' home, looking for their mother, and Mrs. Clark is attempting to feed them, but the Clarks are pessimistic about the fawns' chances of survival.

Mrs. Bissattini said Friday she heard dogs barking on the night of the deer's death.

The dog captured Tuesday was reclaimed the next day by Peter A. Tolger of 47 Bayo Vista Avenue, Larkspur, a Marin County Humane Society spokesman said. The dog was released on payment of a $7 impounding fee and $3 for food. The owners also were cited for "dog being at large."

The Humane Society said reports of dogs chasing deer in Marin County come in an average of once a week.

Gallinas Sewer Hookup Hearing Slated By Board

The Las Gallinas Valley Sanitary District board - which for the past several months has been wrestling with its sewer connection and land annexation policies - inched closer Thursday night to resolving the issue.

The board set Aug. 10 as the date of a public hearing at which it will decide whether the flow capacity of the district plant on Smith Ranch Road should be expanded.

At issue is whether the district, faced with strict new pollution standards as well as a plant that can't handle much more sewage, should make additions to the system or discontinue accepting new land annexations and hookups.

The board authorized district engineers to prepare preliminary plans for expansion of the plant biofilter for presentation at the Aug. 10 hearing. The improvement - costing about $150,000 - would increase the district's sewerage flow capacity from its current 2.25 million gallons to 3.25 million gallons a day, according to Lelia O'Kane, district secretary.

Although homeowner groups have urged the board to put a lid on new development in the area, "there wasn't too much opposition" to the possible plant expansion from the 40 homeowners at the meeting, Mrs. O'Kane said.

But board president Frank Solomon Jr. said he expected homeowners to appear in force at the August hearing.

"We are near capacity," he said. "We've got to make a decision on expansion of that plant or not."

He said that, in any case, the Regional Water Quality Control Board would make the final decision as to whether plant expansion is acceptable.

Solomon said the board agreed Thursday that the district's plant had the capacity to handle "at least 25 more connections" and promptly set these aside for single-family residences. He said the board granted three of the connections to homes located at 16 Carmel Court, 120 Garden Avenue and 48 Mahogany Drive.

Discussion of a $236,000 preliminary operating budget for 1972-73 was postponed to June 29.

U.S., China Agreed On Kissinger Mission

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The United States and China today officially characterized the talks between Presidential assistant Henry A. Kissinger and Premier Chou En-Lai as "extensive, earnest and frank."

A joint statement, released simultaneously here and in Peking, said the talks "consisted of concrete consultations to promote the normalization of relations between the two countries and an exchange of views on issues of common interest."

The statement, which gave no details of the subjects covered, was released as Kissinger completed his initial report to President Nixon in Camp David, Md., the presidential retreat, and flew back to Washington.

On his return to the capital, Kissinger told newsmen that his conversations with Chou convinced him that neither China nor the Soviet Union, nor any other major country, had any interest in seeing the Vietnam conflict continue. He stopped short, however, of any indication he had been able to enlist Chinese support in encouraging the North Vietnamese to engage in further peace talks.

"Vietnam was discussed at some length," Kissinger said. "Obviously it is a subject on which we have differing interpretations of the situation." He declined to discuss the substance of the discussions, saying that "events will be more important than what we say" andthat "the problem is to find a solution that is just and reasonable on both sides and the talks were conducted in that spirit."

Kissinger met for an hour and 15 minutes with Nixon and Secretary of State William P. Rogers at the White House immediately upon his return from Peking Thursday and then flew by helicopter to Camp David for two more hours of talks with the President. Rogers left today for a SEATO meeting in Canberra, Australia, and a world tour.

Park-Rec Budget Hike Requested

The San Rafael Park and Recreation Commission has voted to add $50,000 to the capital improvement budget that now will be submitted to the city council, Andrew J. Snyder, city park and recreation director said.

The new total request will be for $307,600, confronting the city with finding new means of financing if the program is adopted as part of the 1972-73 budget, Snyder reported.

Second priority was given to a request for $25,000 to provide two tennis courts in Freitas Park adjacent to Don Timoteo School. Third priority was voted for a $60,000 request to finance purchase of additional land next to the city's 12-acre Albert Park as the site for a future community recreation center.

The commission also asked the city to budget $12,000 to remodel and add two baseball diamonds at Albert Park.

Year In Jail For Burglar Who Failed

A 32-year-old San Franciscan, arrested for the first time when he was 6 years old, was sentenced yesterday to a year in Marin County Jail for the aborted burglary of a Sausalito home.

Walter James Brock and a codefendant, Vernon James Robinson, 23, also of San Francisco, agreed to plea bargains in Marin Superior Court yesterday, the day their trial was to begin.

Robinson's case was continued to July 31 for sentencing in order to obtain a probation report, but Judge Samuel W. Gardiner sentenced Brock on the basis of a report made a month ago when he was sentenced to 30 days in jail for car theft.

In addition to the jail time, the judge placed Brock on five years of probation and gave him a suspended state prison sentence. The district attorney recommended that he be sent to prison.

Brock admitted to his probation officer that he has used heroin since he was 13 years old and has not worked since 1960. He has been arrested eight times on suspicion of drug offenses and four times for investigation of thefts.

He and Robinson were arrested April 4 by Sausalito police who said they found the two men in the home of Helme W. Schweikert of 5 Cloudview Trail.

Bagley Testifies In Desegregation Case

REDWOOD CITY (UPI)— Appealing for a long-term school desegregation program that would "ease the divisiveness in society," a Marin assemblyman said the Sequoia High School District should be given more time before being forced to implement a desegregation law he authored.

Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, was testifying Friday on behalf of the school district defending itself in San Mateo County Superior Court against a suit brought by Mrs. Dorothy Sanders of East Palo Alto.

She has asked Superior Judge Frank W. Rose to order the district to desegregate under terms of the Bagley Bill. The law which went into effect in March requires desegregation steps if "significant imbalance" is found in school racial statistics.

Mrs. Sanders contended that Ravenswood High School has 52 per cent minority enrollment while the average minority enrollment in the district is 18 per cent.

The school district argues that guidelines for desegregation under the new law have not yet been drawn up by the state board of education.

Bagley said the board will begin in July drawing up the guidelines, as required under the legislation.

"We haven't solved all the problems of society at this time," he testified, "but I would prefer to implement something over a period of two, three of four years which would be prejudicial in the interim but in the long run would ease the divisiveness in society." The school district has introduced a voluntary busing plan to permit students to change between the district's six high schools of their own volition, as part of a desegregation program.

Court Date Set In Burglary Case

George Gerhardt, 20, no known address, has been bound over to Marin Superior Court on a burglary charge.

Gerhardt, who is to appear in court Wednesday, is charged with stealing two typewriters worth $800 from the Thofra Corp. in Sausalito on May 20. His father told authorities his son admitted the theft to him.

The elder Gerhardt runs a metal stamping business next door to the victimized firm.

Plant Expansion

SANTA ROSA — The Sonoma County Board of Zoning Adjustments Thursday approved the request of Jack Buchanan for expansion of his wholesale frozen food plant at 6030 Redwood Highway, Penngrove.

San Rafael Town Meet In October

San Rafael's first town meeting is to be held Oct. 14 at a location to be decided, its organizers announced.

It will be an all-day affair, featuring workshops on local problems, then a mass meeting in the evening to vote on resolutions proposed by the workshops.

Announcing the date, Priscilla Bull, the San Rafael housewife whose enthusiasm played a major role in triggering town meeting plans, said the organizers are considering San Rafael High School or Dominican College as the site.

Organizers of the event met Wednesday and formed the Town Meeting Association. Steven B. Sachs of 17 Dominican Drive was elected chairman, and Mrs. Bull, of 117 San Rafael Avenue, was named vice chairman.

Four committees formed to research topics for town meeting workshops will compile fact sheets on city government and its operation for the public to study before the meeting, Mrs. Bull said. Subjects now under study include environment, social problems, community development and government structure.

Enthusiasm For Joint City Plans

A consultant's study, which recommends the consolidation of the fire, public works and parks and recreation programs of Fairfax and San Anselmo, has been enthusiastically received by councilmen from both cities.

Fairfax Mayor Albert E. Gately and councilmen E. Ross Parkerson and Frank J. Egger, along with San Anselmo councilmen Kenneth L. Anderson and Woodrow V. Capurro, "appeared quite interested" in the possibilities of intercity cooperation, according to Charles R. Leitzell, San Anselmo planning director.

The findings of the Berkeley-based firm of Baxter, McDonald and Co. — aired Thursday night at a public hearing in San Anselmo — indicated that both cities would benefit from a consolidation of services, Leitzell said.

He said the consultant's study showed that intercity cooperation would cut tax rates by eliminating duplicated spending in both city public works departments as well as provide an expanded parks and recreation program.

Leitzell said officials from both cities were disappointed that the meeting drew only five citizens, including one each from the Sleepy Hollow and Oak Manor homeowner associations, one representative of the Irate Taxpayers Association and a citizen from Kentfield.

He said the next step in the examination of the benefits of intercity cooperation would be an analysis of a public opinion poll taken in Ross Valley by the consultant firm, and a summary report and implementation program.

The study was commissioned last August by the San Anselmo City Council.

He said another meeting on the matter would be held in about a month.

$1.3 Million Corte Madera Budget In 1972-3 Asked

By PAT PERRY

Corte Madera Town Mgr. Ronald E. Bartels has proposed a $1,303,997 budget for fiscal 1972-73 - an increase of 21.58 per cent over this fiscal year's total of $1,154,807.

If approved by the town council, which will begin budget sessions Monday at 7:30 p.m. at the town hall, the budget would require a tax rate of $1.8525 per $100 of assessed valuation. This represents a 79 per cent increase over the current year's tax rate of $1.03.

However, at the same time he recommends that the town sanitary district tax rate be reduced by 20 cents from its present 60 cents per $100, noting that current discussions of takeover of the district make it prudent to reduce the overall reserve.

Increases in the proposed budget include improvements in the town's fire department, a fuller recreation program, and a 2 per cent cost-of-living salary raise to fulltime employees.

The fire department's proposed budget of $174,403 more than doubles this year's total of $85,274. It carries a request for six more paid firemen to augment the town's present five-man paid department, the Corte Madera Volunteer Fire Department, and the town's public works employees who form an additional volunteer group during daytime.

The request for extra men is the outgrowth of a consultant's report recommending bolstered fire services. The report was asked in the wake of a residential fire that spread quickly despite the efforts of firemen last year.

The department also had requested a new $46,000 pumper, but this was eliminated in the town manager's recommendations.

The recreation department's proposed budget is $64,433, up from $43,008. Included in Bartel's recommendations is employment of a fulltime recreation supervisor and a summer playground staff of 15 leaders and specialists, one tiny tot instructor, two-and-one-fourth youth advisors and two after-school program leaders.

The proposed general purpose tax rate of $1.8525 is based upon a projected assessed valuation of $31,064,530, noted Bartels. This compares with 1971-72 assessed valuation of $30,663,629.

Capital projects proposed in the budget include reconstruction of street service and trench facilities on Tunnel Lane, continuation of street improvements on Christmas Tree Hill, and further improvements to Corte Madera Avenue.

Final improvement of the lagoon in the park is included, said Bartels, with $25,000 total costs.

"Completion of this project will complete the master plan of the park and free future funds for construction of other facilities which might be located on the east side of Highway 101," he added.

The proposed cost of the city's redevelopment agency totals $229,382. It includes hiring a secretary for the director, purchase of an accounting machine, and purchase of the $46,000 pumper which was eliminated from the fire department's budget.

Bartels pointed out that other necessary town improvements can be installed through the use of tax increment bonds based upon the property value of the proposed shopping center development anticipated by the Redevelopment Agency.

"It is anticipated that some of the Town's major flood control problems in the area around the proposed shopping center site can be corrected through the mechanism without being a financial tax burden upon the Town," he states.

Revised salary schedules for town employees will be submitted to the council at a later date. However a salary raise for Bartels himself is included in the town manager's department. He recommends that his salary be increased from $21,050 to $23,100, and that he be given a private car allowance of $1,500 a year.

Budget figures for major town departments for 1972-73 with this year's figures in parenthesis, are:

Mayor and council, $13,200 ($13,200); town manager, $25,750 ($23,400); town clerk and elections $27,173 ($29,873); finance $28,374 ($24,960); law, $10,000 ($7,000); planning $19,077 ($10,450); non-departmental $67,238 ($61,991); retirement $86,172 ($68,467); debt service $16,283 ($16,683); police $294,170 ($269,716); fire $174,403 ($85,274); building inspection and zoning $22,557 ($22,164).

Public works - engineering and administration, $47,281 ($46,922); streets $150,277 ($181,758); floor control $62,412 ($41,109); building and landscape $52,467 ($55,542); town parks $46,618 ($54,808); corporation yard $25,586 ($29,384).

Library $70,526 ($70,526); recreation $64,433 ($43,008).

ENCHANTING

On a ¾ acre knoll with an unobstructable view from every room of the low hills and Bay, there is a charming way of life waiting for the discriminating buyer. The redwood exterior and shake roof set a feeling of warmth and informality which continues thruout the interior of the home. Oregon pine walls and high beam ceilings are in the dining room and living room featuring a fireplace of Sonoma stone. The pine is repeated in the family kitchen with its Spanish tile counter, used brick island stove covered by a huge copper hood with a brick BBQ and raised fireplace and a complete wet bar. 2 bedrooms, and 2 baths, tastefully decorated, complete this small home. Low maintenance makes the gardening very enjoyable. Exclusive. $74,500.

New Voices In Picking Of Bishops

But Pope Representatives Still Hold The Final Say

VATICAN CITY (UPI)—The papal displomatic service has emerged with its power unscathed from a new Vatican document on the election of Roman Catholic bishops.

The document gives national Catholic hierarchies a definite voice in selection of bishops. But the Pope's representatives still hold make-or-break power over every appointment, whatever the hierarchies decide.,

The document dashed the hopes of Catholic liberals who wanted some form of democratic election of bishops,

Belgian Cardinal Leo J. Suenens once described the papal diplomats as "permanent inspectors" who deprive local churches of their freedom of action.

In the Netherlands, for example, Archbishop Angelo Felici, 52, the Vatican pronuncio, vetoed the choice of liberal bishops made by laymen and priests in Rotterdam and Roermond, and instead called for the appointment of conservatives.

His action brought loud protest from liberal Catholics. The Pastoral Council in Roermond asked the government to expel Felici. Dutch newspaper reports said Cardinal Bernard Jan Alfrink, the primate of the Netherlands, was on the verge of resignation because of the Italian-born nuncio.

But a forme papal diplomat, now a cardinal living in Rome, who knows the Dutch situation first hand, said Felici did the right thing.

"The Dutch laity still is predominantly conservative," he told UPI. "The ferment in Holland is caused by a vocal minority. Archbishop Felici's duty was to see that the majority was properly with Rome."

Of the 58 nuncios (ambassadors) and pro-nuncios listed in the Vatican yearbook, all but 14 are Italians. Most have spent their entire careers in the service of the Vatican curia, the Catholic Church's central government.

This leads to criticism that they stifle local innovations in order to impose the curia view, try to make all churches behave like the Italian church, and lack knowledge of pastoral work.

Archbishop Giovanni Benelli, the under-secretary of state at the Vatican and the effective head of the diplomatic service, said in a recent speech that the nuncios are extensions of the Pope rather than representatives of the Vatican.

Their main task, he said, is to "support, comfort and encourage bishops, who are often prostrated by the responsibility, loneliness and the immense difficulties which the governing of a diocese means today.",

Politics comes into it too. Benelli said the Church as a duty to become "an effective and efficient presence in the world ... for this reason the Holy See does not refuse to deal with regimes which are atheistic, agnostic, materialistic, totalitarian or military."

The career of a Vatican diplomat usually begins at the Ecclesiastical academy in central Rome, the alma mater of Pope Paul VI.

Here, young priests study international law, the history of church diplomacy, the subtle art of writing diplomatic reports, and four languages—French, English, Spanish and German. They also must obtain canon law degrees if they do not have them before entering the academy.

The graduates—there are only about 10 or 12 a year—stand a good chance of winning a Cardinal's hat and a better than average chance of becoming Pope.

The stately academy, which was founded in 1701 as a seminary for noblemen wishing to enter the priesthood, has produced five Popes and about 100 cardinals. In addition, the last three pontiffs have all risen from the diplomatic service.

Graduates are sent immediately to a papal nunciature or delegation for two or three years, before being brought back to work for a spell in the Vatican secretariat of state.

Pope Paul's first assignment was to the nunciature in Warsaw.

The Vatican now maintains diplomatic relations with 72 countries. The papal representative—always an archbishop—is called to nuncio in countries which recognize him as the dean of the diplomatic corps. Otherwise he has the title of pro-nuncio.

Perhaps because so much of its work is done in secrecy, the Vatican diplomatic service is priased for efficiency by some and damned for machiavellianism by others.

"They say we have the best diplomatic service in the world," said the late Cardinal Domenico Tardini, Pope John XXIII's secretary of State. "Well, if we are the first, I pity the second."

TERRA LINDA CELEBRATION

Father Furgus McGuinness of Nazareth House, Terra Linda, was the celebrant at a concelebrated mass Wednesday afternoon, marking his 25th anniversary in the priesthood. Seven friends in the priesthood from Los Angeles and Sacramento joined in the celebration for McGuinness. A dinner later in the day was given in his honor by the 100-plus residents of Nazareth House, a retirement home.

GOD AND MAN

When Does Life Begin And End?

By LOUIS CASSELS

When does human life begin? When does it end?

Those may sound like simple, easily answered questions. But in fact, each of them currently is the subject of controversy which has legal, medical and biological dimensions.

When human life begins is the crux of the dispute over the morality of liberalized abortion laws. If a quickened fetus is not a live human creature, a case can be made for allowing a woman to terminate a pregnancy whenever she and her physician choose to do so. But if the fetus at some point becomes a truly human though still embryonic person, abortion may quite reasonably be called a form of murder.

Even more complex issues are involved in determining when human life ends. Until recently, law, medicine and religion accepted without question the ancient concept that death occurs when the heart stops beating.

But modern medicine has outdated that concept. It now is possible for a well-equipped hospital to keep a human heart pumping for hours, days, weeks or even years after the body whose blood it circulates has become irreversibly dead as a thinking, feeling, willing human person.

This fact has compelled doctors, jurists and moral theologians to re-think the traditional view which associates death with cessation of heart function. The emerging view holds that death occurs when brain activity ceases without hope of being revived.

The end of brain activity can be determined with scientific precision through electro-encephalographs which record brain "waves." When the rhythmic up-and-down motion of those brain waves gives way to a steady flat line on the scope, the brain has gone out of business for good, and there is no way in which it can ever again be made to function as the center of human consciousness, emotion and volition.

The new concept of timing death from the cessation of brain function rather than heartbeat has great practical significance, for two reasons. First, it spares families the emotional ordeal and enormous expense of keeping a "human vegetable" going as long as modern medical machinery can contrive to keep its heart beating.

Second, it enables physicians to accomplish heart transplants from persons who are mentally dead into those who have a chance to live healthy, normal lives at a much earlier hour when the chances for success are far greater.

It was a heart transplant operation, protested by survivors of the deceased, that brought the new concept of death before a court in Richmond. Va., recently. Survivors sought $100,000 damages from doctors who performed the operation, claiming the patient's heart had not stopped beating, therefore he was not legally dead, when the surgery was performed.

Medical evidence showed the patient's biological functions had been artificially maintained by respirator apparatus for several hours after brain activity had ceased. It was during this period that his heart was removed for transplantation.

Dr. William Collins of Yale, a noted physician, and Dr. Joseph Fletcher, an Episcopal theologian who teaches medical ethics at the University of Virginia Medical School, both expressed the opinion that death occurs — in the eyes of the law and in the eyes of God —when the brain irrevocably ceases to function.

The jury agreed with them, and threw out the damage suit.

This doesn't finally settle the question, of course. The same issue is bound to arise again, perhaps many times, before other courts and other juries. But the Richmond verdict may well prove to be a milestone in law, medicine and theology.

Seminary Librarian Now Member Of The Faculty

Dr. G. Paul Hamm of Mill Valley, librarian at Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary, has been elected to faculty status by the theological school's board of trustees.

The announcement was made this week by Golden Gate President Harold K. Graves following a recent meeting of trustees

Hamm, of 20 Platt Court, received the doctor of sacred theology degree at Golden Gate Seminary in May. He has been librarian at the seminary since 1968.

A native of Fort Smith, Ark., Hamm is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Kirby Hamm Sr. of Benicia. In addition to earning the S.T.D. degree from Golden Gate, he holds the bachelor of divinity and the master of theology degrees from the seminary. He received the master of library science degree from the University of California, Berkeley, in 1969.

A graduate of Ouachita Baptist University, Hamm earned the bachelor of arts degree there in 1956. Formerly of Rancho Cordgva, he has served on the committee on committees of the Southern Baptist Convention, is a former first vice-president of the Southern Baptist General Convention of California and is former president of the California Baptist Foundation.

'Stay On The Beam' Is Topic

"Divine direction is more than a hazy intiution. When we truly listen to God and obey, we are led and guided in tangible, practical ways," according to Eugene Depold Tyc, C.S.B., of San Diego.

Tyc's lecture, titled "Stay on the Beam," will be given Friday at 8 p.m. at the First Church of Christ, Scientist, Sausalito. Admission is free and the lecture is open to the public.

Tyc is a native of Philadelphia and is a graduate of Drexel Institute of Technology. During World War II he served in the infantry and in intelligence. He retired from business in 1957 to give full time to the Christian Science ministry.

Tyc is touring the U.S. and Canada as a member of the Christian Science Board of Lectureship of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston.

RELIGIOUS EVENTS

Noah's Ark, Women Lib, Ecology To Be Satired

A musical satire of Noah's Ark, women's liberation and ecological balance will be sung at Lucas Valley Community Church tomorrow.

The adaptation of the 1971 Broadway musical, "Two by Two," will be sung by Pastor Dale Nystrom and Ed Jensen, a Marin member of the Loring Club Male Chorus of San Francisco. They will be accompanied by organist Betty Johnson of Lucas Valley and by Becky Lindstrom, bassist, Chris Unsoeld, drummer, and Rich Newman, trombonist.

Some excerpts from the works of poet James Weldon Johnson will be read by Shawnee Farnham, a Terra Linda High School graduate.

The musical is another of a series used by Nystrom during his eight years at the church. In August he will sing "Now Songs of Faith," using various contemporary religious musical ideas.

The church service is only at 9:30 a.m. during summer months. Coffee and donuts will be served by church youth following the service.

Gospel Concert

The Harbor Light Quartet will present a concert of gospel music at 11 a.m. tomorrow at the Neighborhood Church of the Christian Missionary Alliance, Petaluma.

The quartet, which is based in Petaluma, has traveled extensively throughout the state. Rev. Paul Allen of Oakmont Community Church of Santa Rosa will present slides of his recent trip to the Holy Land at the 7 p.m. service.

Informal Program

The Mill Valley Community Church choir, under direction of Eugene Ramey will present an informal free public program tomorrow at 3 p.m. at the church.

Augmented by five guest singers, the choir will perform the Bach Cantata No. 150 accompanied by an ensemble composed of Charles Meacham and Mary Helen Weinstein, violins; Jan Gauder, cello, and Robaline Meacham, organ continuo. The ensemble also will perform the Haydn string trio sonata, Opus 8, No. 3.

Tea will be served following the performance.

Choir Rehearsal

The Marin Bach Choir, under the direction of Ted Flath, invites all who enjoy singing sacred music to join in rehearsal on Mondays at 8 p.m. at Community Congregational Church, 145 Rock Hill Drive, Tiburon.

The choir presently is working on a Benjamin Britten cycle of songs, plus the music of Handel. The next rehearsal will be July 10.

Flath is minister of music at All Souls Church in Berkeley and director of the Berkeley Bach Choir and the Peninsula Bach Choir. The three choirs are scheduled to join forces for several concerts next year.

Skelton Named To Top Post

Dr. J. Roger Skelton, professor of religious education at Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary in Mill Valley, has been named vice-president of the Southern Baptist Religious Education Association for 1972-73.

Skelton's election to the office was announced following a two-day annual meeting earlier this month of the association in Philadelphia. The SBREA is for professional ministers and teachers of religious education in churches, colleges, and seminaries. Membership comes from within the 11.7 million-member Southern Baptist Convention.

Skelton has been professor of religious education at Golden Gate since 1967. A bachelor of arts graduate of Mississippi College in Clinton, Miss., he earned the master and doctor of religious education degrees from Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth, Tex. He is a former high school teacher, and has served as a minister of education and music for churches in California. Texas and Arkansas.

In 1959, Skelton joined the staff of the Baptist Sunday school board, Sunday school department, Nashville, Tenn., as superintendent of teaching. In 1961, he became program and curriculum consultant for the department and, in 1964, moved to the training union department of the board as supervisor of the adult-youth field services unit.

Skelton has been a member of the association for 13 years. He is a member of the Western Religious Education Association and served one year as president. He also is a member of the Adult Education Association. He has written numerous articles for Southern Baptist publications.

Evangelist To Crusade In Oakland

Rev. Morris Cerullo, one of the world's foremost evangelists, will be speaker for an eight-day Bay Area "spiritual life crusade" sponsored by nearly 40 churches of various denominations, it was announced this week by Rev. James Herring of Bethel Assembly of God Church, Oakland.

The crusade will be July 9-16 in the Oakland Auditorium. Sunday services will be at 2:30 p.m., with weekday services scheduled at 7:30 p.m. There will be no Saturday service.

Earlier this year, Cerullo conducted crusades in Barbados, West Indies, and in Ceylon, where more than 60,000 persons attended one service and where he was welcomed by government officials. Ceylon is 90 per cent Buddhist.

He is known for his divine-healing ministry, and will have special prayer for the sick each night of the crusade.

She Enjoys 'Working For My Lord'

DES MOINES — In one year Elsie J. Grimm made $666 for her church by selling old clothes to people who can't always afford new ones.

"I sell things for five or 10 cents. The top price for anything is $1," she said. "In the winter I get 35 to 40 customers a month."

It all started several years ago when Mrs. Grim, now 72, gave a pair of shoes to a little girl who was walking in the snow in stocking feet.

Mrs. Grimm's store is in a two-room house next to her home. Her church, Disciples of Christ, to which she gives all the money she takes in, pays utilities.

Individuals and church groups bring discarded clothing, shoes, drapes, rugs and appliances to Mrs. Grimm. She devotes all of her time to "my rummage" because "I enjoy working for my Lord."

Barry Back To Warriors

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Wayward forward Rick Barry has been ordered by a federal judge to honor the final two seasons of a five-year $1 million contract with the Golden State Warriors.

Friday's decision by U.S. District Judge Alfonso J. Zirpoli prevents Barry from playing with anyone but the Warriors next season.

"Unless Barry is enjoined from playing for the New York Nets or any other professional team ... San Francisco will suffer irreparable and permanent injuries," said the judge.

The decision climaxed a lengthy bout of court proceedings involving Barry who signed a five-year contract with the San Francisco Warriors on Oct. 2, 1969. The team later changed its name to the Golden State Warriors and is playing all its home games in Oakland.

Barry signed the contract with the Warriors when he was playing with the Oakland Oaks of the American Basketball Association. He took the action when the franchise was sold to a Washington, D.C. combine.

Since then, Barry has played for the Washington Caps, Virginia Squires and the past two seasons with the Nets.

Barry was in Puerto Rico and could not be reached for comment on the court decision. However, last month he commented: "I want to play in New York but I'll abide by the judge's decision."

That means Barry will play with the Warriors this season and during the 1973-74 season to fulfill his five-year contract.

But Barry's attorney can still appeal the decision or request a trial before Judge Zirpoli.

Franklin Mieuli, owner of the Warriors, sought the injunction on grounds his contract with Barry was binding.

"The Warriors have been made whole again," was Mieuli's cryptic comment when he learned of Judge Zirpoli's decision.

Mieuli always figured that someday the 6-foot-7 forward would return to the Warriors. To reinforce his faith, Mieuli hung Rick's unused jersey—No. 24—on the back of a door in the Warriors office.

It's still there.

DON'T LOOK BACK — Emile (Flip) Waldteufel of Mill Valley, looking back over his shoulder at rivals in a bicycle road race, now is looking forward to the Olympic Games in Munich in August. He qualified for the U.S. Olympic team last week.

The Marin Olympian Is A Bicycle Racer

By LEW CODDINGTON

While everybody was looking the other way, toward the jumpers and the sprinters and the swimmers, Emile Waldteufel came quietly pedaling into the spotlight last week.

The Mill Valley-based bicyclist became the first Marin County athlete to make the United States Olympic team since San Rafael swimmer Eleanor Garatti in 1928 when he qualified in road racing in the trials at Lake Luzerne, N.Y., last Friday.

Once Waldteufel gets discovered by the press and public (and once the inevitable spate of typographical errors is over), punsters will have a field day:

His first name is pronounced "A meal," such as is made by a cook, which is fitting, since he is an excellent chef.

His last name is pronounced "Wald'-toy-full," and is German for "wood devil," entirely appropriate for a cross-country cyclist who gains his fame winding through rustic forests at Satanic speeds.

The 27-year-old Waldteufel was seemingly oblivious to new found fame, however, as he remained back East to race in Canada. He probably won't return to Mill Valley until shortly before the U. S. team goes into practice July 17 for the mid-August Olympics.

To make the team, Waldteufel had to survive a cruel jab of fate. Three days before his first race, he discovered his bike frame was cracked at the rear stay, the area where the back wheel locks into the frame.

Emile rides an odd-sized French bicycle, and couldn't just walk down to his local Schwinn shop and get a new one. He sent away to Berkeley for a bike, but it didn't arrive in time; he finally had the crack welded, and the bike held up.

The trials lasted for a week, June 11-17, and the top 12 finishers in over-all point standings were chosen. Emile was among the top half-dozen. Later, the 12 men will be pared to eight for the trip to the Munich Olympics.

Waldteufel was an alternate to the Olympics four years ago, but it would take a catastrophe to relegate him to that status again this year.

It was quite an accomplishment for someone whose training was constantly being interrupted by a demanding job. Even slinging hash over a pot-bellied stove would be tiring enough, but Emile is the No. 2 chef at the Mirabelle, regarded by at least one critic as the best restaurant in San Francisco. "It's a tense job," pointed out his mother, Eugenie.

He quit the job in March to begin intensive training, but finds bicycling does not interfere with his career. "They keep asking him back and understand all these things," said his mother. "A good chef can always find work."

When not cooking or cycling, Flip (as he has been dubbed since infancy) spends a great deal of the time playing congas. About two years ago, the group he was playing for, Kwanditos, recorded some songs for Capitol records, but so far the cuts have not been released.

Oddly, Flip is the only cyclist in a family including his father (also Emile), mother and three

JACKSON HOMERS

Ryan, Angels Stop A's, 2-1

OAKLAND (UPI) — Oakland A's Reggie Jackson showed the power, but it was California Angel pitcher Nolan Ryan who walked away with the victory.

Using a blazing fastball that hopped more than Bugs Bunny, Ryan allowed only two hits Friday night in leading the California Angels to a 2-1 win over the Oakland Athletics. It gave Ryan a 7-5 record.

"I've got my confidence now and I've got my rhythm down," said the righthander whom the Angels obtained from the New York Mets before the season opened. "What makes me most confident is that I've been able to put together three complete games in a row."

One of the hits off Ryan was a titanic 475-foot homer by Reggie Jackson in the opening inning. It cleared the fence in dead center with plenty to spare.

"He's quicker than instant coffee...and throws faster than God," said Jackson who is tied for the American League home run leadership with Detroit's Norm Cash at 14.

The only other hit off Ryan was a harmless single by Dave Duncan in the seventh inning.

Bob Oliver creamed a two-out home run in the ninth inning to break up a pitching duel between Ryan and rookie Dave Hamilton. Oliver's blast was the first allowed this season by Hamilton who had won four in a row before suffering his first loss.

"I like to hit in this park more than in any other park in the league," said Oliver, a first baseman from Sacramento, who now has four gamewinning hits at the Oakland Coliseum, including three while he played with the Kansas City Royals.

This afternoon, Vida Blue (1-3) of the A's matches slants with Clyde Wright. Blue is seeking his second straight victory while Wright goes after his eighth win. He has lost three.

Despite the defeat, the A's

Colbert's Homer Defeats Giants

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — One sign of a winning baseball club is the ability to maintain a slim lead.

The San Francisco Giants carried a 1-0 advantage into the fifth inning and allowed the homestanding San Diego Padres to tie it up. In the eighth inning, the roof caved in for the Bay Area nine as Padre first baseman Nate Colbert blasted a three-run homer last night to defeat San Francisco, 4-1.

Meanwhile, Padre pitcher Steve Arlin hurled a sparkling one-hitter in going the distance.

Arlin, who blanked Pittsburgh on a two-hitter Sunday, improved his record to 7-6.

Colbert's homer, his 14th of the season, came off Sam McDowell and broke a 1-1 deadlock. McDowell's mark slipped to 8-5.

The only hit off Arlin was a triple by Garry Maddox with one out in the second inning which the Giants turned into their only run.

The San Diego righthander struck out eight and walked three.

MEN'S 35 TENNIS

Top Four Doubles Teams Advance To Semi-Finals

The upsets continued to strike the singles but avoid the doubles yesterday, and John Williams of Tiburon wishes it were the other way around.

The National Men's 35 Hardcourt Tennis Championships moved into the semi-final round today at the Mill Valley Tennis Club, and will conclude tomorrow with singles finals at noon and doubles finals to follow.

An admission of $1.50 for adults and 75 cents for children under 16 will be charged today and tomorrow, tournament officials have announced.

The top four seeds in the doubles entered today's semis, including No. 1 seeded Don Kierbow of Carmichael and Whitney Reed of Alameda. That duo knocked off eighth-seeded Williams and Jack Bowker of Sacramento yesterday, 7-5, 7-6, in a tough match.

Kierbow and Reed were to play third-seeded Jim Landin and Jim Schmidt at 3:30 p.m. following a match between second-seeded Clif Mayne - Hugh Ditzler and fourth-seeded Don Gale - Bob Hill at 2.

In singles semis, unseeded giant-killer Jerry De Witts of Santa Barbara was to meet unseeded Fred Hagist of Bakersifled at 12:30 and second-seeded Jim Landin of Littleton, Colo., was to face sixth-seeded

MONTEREY CAR RACES COMMENCE

The fun is over and now the drivers get down to business in the Olympia Sprints at Laguna Seca raceway in Monterey.

Practice runs for the more than 350 entrants, including 15 Marin-affiliated drivers and a Petaluman, were held yesterday. Three races were scheduled for today, beginning at 3:40 p.m., and 10 others will be held tomorrow, beginning at 9:45 a.m.

Ex-Golden Seal Roberts Signs With Bruins

BOSTON (UPI) —The Boston Bruins announced Saturday that Doug Roberts, a former California Golden Seal, has signed a multi-year contract with the National Hockey League's Stanley Cup champions.

Roberts spent last season with the Bruins' top farm club, leading the Boston Braves in scoring with 35 goals and 40 assists. The Bruins acquired the Detroit native last summer from the California Golden Seals.

Roberts played three games with the parent club during the 1971-72 season and scored against the Minnesota North Stars his first time on the ice in his first game.

Singles Crown To Chris Evert In London Net

LONDON (UPI) — Chris Evert, 17-year-old super girl from Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., won the singles title in her first British tournament, the Rothmans London Lawn Tennis Championships at Queens Club today.

She continued her run of triumphs with a 6-4, 6-0 win over the 6 foot-1 inch Australian Karen Krantzcke in just under under an hour.

Playing cooly and cleverly Miss Evert elevated her string of singles victories since she arrived here two weeks ago to seven, during which she has dropped only one set.

Santa Clara Swim Second For DeMont

I-J Special Report

SANTA CLARA — Employing another of his patented stretch flurries, distance ace Rick DeMont of Terra Linda surged to a second place finish yesterday in the 400-meter freestyle at the Santa Clara International Swim Invitational here.

DeMont, 16, broke away from a crowd of five battling for second place behind the eventual winner, Gary Hall of Huntington Beach, Calif., and put on a thrilling run that nearly edged the Indiana University star.

Rick covered the distance in his best effort of 4:06.2 four seconds faster than his previous best clocking.

The pre-meet favorite in the 400, John Kinsella, of Indiana withdrew at the last minute because of a family member's illness.

Kinsella's withdrawal from the meet leaves DeMont a realistic shot at winning his best event, the 1500-meter free tomorrow. The main competition for the Marin Aquatic Club star will come from 25-year-old Mike Burton of the Arden Hills Swim Club, Sacramento.

DeMont's approximate "splits" for each 100 meters along the way were: 1:01, 1:03, 1:03, 1:59.

The last time was the one that nearly undid Hall, who is world-record holder in the 400-meter individual medley. Leading by as much as five seconds midway through the race, Hall had to stroke for his life to hold off DeMont's herculean charge.

"I thought it was (Steve) Genter (of Lakewood)" setting the early pace, Rick mused with some teammates following the race. "I thought he'd die."

A distance swimmer in his own right, Hall did not face, but agonized on the final lap as DeMont steadily gained because of the high school senior's amazing endurance.

San Jose Honor For Corder

Tom Corder of Novato, now a professional baseball player in the Los Angeles Dodgers chain, has been named to the Sports Hall of Fame at California State University, San Jose (formerly San Jose State).

"Yeah, it's all right," said Corder from his relatives' home in Novato, where he is staying following a two-week Army summer camp. He will rejoin the Class A Bakersfield team in San Jose next week.

Corder, a shortstop, graduated from San Jose in 1970. His junior year, he batted .385 and was named the most valuable player in the West Coast Ahletic Conference. His senior year, he batted .289 in the tougher Pacific Coast Athletic Conference and led the Spartans in five offensive departments.

The recent balloting was the first since 1964.

Jamieson Leads By 2 In Golf Tournament

NORTHBROOK, Ill. (UPI)—Doug Sanders, a guy who hasn't been doing much on the golf tour in recent years, may be on his way to his finest season because he always travels prepared.

Like this week. Sanders showed up for the $150,000 Western Open on the first weekend of the summer carrying, of all things, thermal underwear in his suitcase.

But Friday, he found he needed the extra insulation against the chilly weather, and then he went out and shot a five-under-par 66 that left him two strokes behind pacesetting Jim Jamieson midway through the tournament.

"I was a little bit better prepared for the weather than I was yesterday," observed Sanders, who is in the midst of his hottest surge in years.

Jamieson, the pudgy local favorite who is a former Illinois amateur champion, became the only player in the field with successive sub-par rounds when he added a four-under 67 Friday to an opening 68 for a 135 total.

Sanders followed at 137 with J.C. Snead at 138, R.H. Sikes, the first round co-leader, at 139, and Hale Irwin and Steve Oppermann at 141.

It took a score of seven-overpar 149 or better to make the cut for the final 36 holes and among the players who missed it were former Masters champion Gay Brewer and former National Amateur champions Lanny Wadkins and Bob Murphy.

Billy Casper, a three-time Western Open champion, was nine strokes off the pace at 144. Defending champion Bruce Crampton was at 146 with a pair of 73s. Napa's Ron Cerrudo was at 149 and made the cut.

THERE'S PLENTY OF ROOM TO MOVE AROUND IN OUR SPACIOUS VOLVO 144 LOUNGE.

When it comes to legroom, our Volvo 144 is the 747 of automobiles. Up front, there's more room to stretch your legs than in a Cadillac.

You aren't cramped together with other passengers. Seating is two-across (three in back), and if you don't like your seat you can always change it.

Volvo's bucket seats adjust to any position between horizontal and vertical. You can even move them up and down. (There's less headroom than a 747, but enough for Swedes up to 6'6".)

A Bowling Clinic In San Rafael

A free bowling educational encounter for Marin County keglers:

Helen Duval, one of the country's top women bowlers, will conduct a free bowling clinic for women Monday at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Last year, Mrs. Duval's clinic drew 150 Marin bowlers at Nave Lanes in Ignacio.

Mrs. Duval carries a 209 average, second highest in the nation, and is captain of the Fitzpatrick Chevrolet California champion team.

According to publicist Ann Arnott, baby sitting will be provided at both the 10-noon and 2:15-4:30 sessions.

A buffet luncheon honoring Mrs. Duval will be held at noon at the bowling alley. Two-dollar tickets may be obtained from Mrs. Arnott, 251 Cazneau Avenue, Sausalito.

NOVATO'S RON REAGAN, second vice president house director at Nave Lanes and Hamilton Air Force Base was the top Marin County bowler this week, registering a healthy 655 series. His display featured a 233 high game at Nave Lanes in Ignacio.

SAN RAFAEL plumber Orlando Conti was in good form this week, he rolled a fine 904 series at Country Club Bowl and had games of 225, 224, 201, and 254.

SIBLING RIVALRY. The McPherson boys are at it again. Brothers Mike and Rich rolled a 620 and 616 series, respectively, to top junior bowlers this week.

A PRIZE WINNER. Bowler Lynette Lipinski collected 10,000 Blue Chip stamps Saturday night at Country Club Bowl by scoring a strike when three gold pins were placed in the 1-2-3 slots during one of her frames that evening, making her a true Blue Chip athlete.

Finley Topics: A's, Giants

By MILTON RICHMAN

OAKLAND, (UPI) — This man was talking about something very close to his heart.

He was talking about the hottest club in baseball, the Oakland A's, and their manager, Dick Williams.

"Dick Williams is doing an outstanding job," he said. "I think I'm well qualified to speak on that subject because I've had some experience hiring managers the past few years. Williams has great rapport with the players, he's aggressive in his thinking, and in this day and age when a manager must have the ability to communicate with players, he does that beautifully. Even to the extent of wearing long hair and a moustache, the same as his players. He cooperates with the front office. He also has great rapport with the general manager and the owner of the club, both of whom happen to be the same."

By this time you know who's doing all the talking about Dick Williams.

That's right, his boss, Charlie Finley, who has hired 10 managers, including the same one twice, during the 12 years he has had his club and who changes them the same way some people change plane reservations.

Some of Charlie Finley's critics say you'll automatically know when the millennium is here because that will be the day Charlie says nice things about his manager.

In that case, the millennium is here.

This is the day.

Finley couldn't possibly have picked a better one because at the moment his A's happen to be the best club in baseball.

They lead the American League West but all the other clubs in the majors as well.

By one of life's little ironies, the club with the worst major league record happens to be in this same area. That would be Horace Stoneham's San Francisco Giants.

There have been suggestions that Finley is so happy over Stoneham's present plight wherein the A's are running 75,000 ahead of last year's attendance and the Giants are down around 200,000 that he feels like dancing in the streets, but Finley insists that isn't the case at all.

"I communicate with Horace from time to time," he says. "Not that often, but occasionally. I think he is a very fine gentleman. He's having his problems now and I can appreciate that. I've had them for many years when I was building my ball club. So I know what it is."

It has been said there is room in the Bay Area here for only one major league club and I asked Finley if he felt that way.

"I don't know, that remains to be seen," he said. "I happen to think the Bay Area is the greatest sports area in the country. Look at it. It has two baseball teams; two football teams; one hockey team, and a basketball team. Six teams in all. I can guarantee you one thing: the Oakland A's and the California Golden Seals (which Finley also owns) are remaining in the Bay Area.

"There has been a lotta horseradish written about me moving the A's to Washington. Rumors, rumors. If a hotel was built to house all the rumors written about Charlie Finley, it would be the biggest hotel in the world."

Finley has perked up Oakland's attendance appreciably with his promotional efforts, two of the latest of which are 'Bald Headed Day' and "Mouschache Day." He introduced "Hot Pants Day" last year which showed off a great number of fancy and not so fancy figures, drawing 43,500 and it went over so well, the A's are trying the same promotion again tomorrow.

Those who once laughed at Finley aren't laughing so much anymore. Starting the World Series on Saturday was his idea and so was playing it at night. Now some of his fellow owners are taking a second look at the one-time steel-mill worker from Gary, Ind., whom they used to brush off as either a nouveau riche eccentric or "a plain out-and-out nut."

Charlie Finley did not give me the impression he is lording it over Horace Stoneham now because his club happens to be up and Stoneham's is down.

"We've even tried to help him not long ago," said Finley. "He needed pitching and we offered him Diego Segui, but he turned him down. So we traded him to the Cardinals the following day."

So what happens? A couple of days later Segui works in relief for the Cards and beats the Giants.

Finley also is somewhat sensitive over the fact he is charged with being an "absentee owner" in his operation of the A's.

"I don't give a damn what they say, I see my club play many games," he says. "I pick 'em up on the road frequently. I'd say I see at least 30 games at home and 50 on the road. What's wrong with that?"

BASEBALL ROUNDUP

Bench Blast Sends Reds Into Top Spot

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

It wasn't Johnny Bench's longest homer of the season but it was certainly one of his most important.

Bench's drive in the fourth inning Friday night hit the foul post screen and that was good enough for a three-run homer that started the Cincinnati Reds on their way to a 7-0 victory over the Houston Astros. It also moved them back in to first place in the NL West, a half-game ahead of the Astros.

Young Ross Grimsley pitched a five-hitter for the victory. Grimsely, who didn't make his first start until May 12 after beginning the season in the minors, is now 4-2.

In the other games, San Diego topped San Francisco 4-1, Los Angeles nipped Atlanta 2-1, Pittsburgh downed Chicago 4-2 and Montreal edged Philadelphia 2-1. The St. Louis at New York game was postponed by rain.

In the American League, New York stopped Cleveland 4-1, California topped Oakland 2-1, Milwaukee trounced Boston, 8-1, Texas edged Chicago 4-3 and Kansas City blanked Minnesota 5-0. Detroit at Baltimore game was postponed by rain.

While Cincinnati and Houston are battling for the lead in the NL West, the Los Angeles Dodgers are also in the race just 2½ games behind the Reds. Frank Robinson hit the 513th homer of his career with two out and a man on in the sixth inning to lift the Dodgers past Atlanta. Robinson's homer moved him out of a tie for eighth place on the all-time list with Eddie Mathews and Ernie Banks. The homer beat Phil Niekro and handed Al Downing the win.

held onto their 3 1-2 game lead over the Chicago White Sox atop the American League West.

Former 31-game winner Denny McLain returns to the minors this weekend after failing to persuade the Oakland Athletics to recall him to the big leagues.

The 28-year-old righthander, who won 31 games for Detroit in 1968, said Friday he would return to Birmingham shortly and be ready to pitch for the Barons Monday night.

"What else can I do?" asked McLain. "They (the A's) have got me against the wall. They've got me under contract. I've got a wife and four children and I'm like anyone else with a wife and four kids.

"I'm physically able to pitch again. I think I could help the A's real well now."

The $75,000 a year pitcher left the Barons in Asheville, N.C., Thursday and flew to the Oakland-San Francisco area for a visit with his family and a talk with A's officials.

After chatting with Oakland manager Dick Williams, McLain said, "He indicated to me that he has no plans for me. He told me they needed a left-handed reliever."

Hockey Star Hull Loop Jump Seen; Cager Hayes Traded

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

WINNIPEG, Man. — Chicago Black Hawkes superstar Bobby Hull is expected to sign a multi-year contract worth nearly $3 million Tuesday with the Winnipeg Jets of the fledging World Hockey Association, according to a Jets spokesman.

Ben Hatskin, owner-president of the Winnipeg club, said Friday that "everything certainly looks good" for the inking of Hull, 33, a 15-year veteran of the National Hockey League Black Hawks.

Stukis said the contract offer was "somewhere around $3 million, give or take a couple hundred thousand." He said it included a five-year playing contract, after which Hull would go into management.

Golf

CAPE CORAL, Fla. — The powerful University of Texas took an eight-stroke lead into today's final round of the seventh National Collegiate Athletic Association golf championships over cross-state rival Houston.

Texas finished the third round Friday with a total of 856 against 864 for second place Houston.

Ben Crenshaw of Texas fired a two-under-par 70 to move into the individual lead with a three round total of nine-under par 207.

Bill Rogers of Houston and Howard Twitty of Arizona State were tied for second at 210.

HUNSTANTON, England — America's top girl golfer, Laura Baugh of Long Beach lost to another teenage champion today in the semi-finals of the British Womens Golf Championship.

The 17-year-old Californian was beaten 7 and 5 by Mickey Walker, 19, reigning title holder and ranked the best British woman golfer of her generation.

Friday's afternoon quarterfinals saw the elimination of three other members of the U.S. Curtis Cup team which defeated Great Britain two weeks ago, Beth Barry of Mobile, Ala., Mrs. Jane Booth, Palm Beach Gardens, Fla., and Barbara McIntire of Colorado Springs, Colo.

Basketball

HOUSTON — Center Elvin Hayes, the leading scorer in the history of the Houston Rockets and one of the top players in the National Basketball Association, has been traded to the Baltimore Bullets for forward Jack Marin and undisclosed future considerations.

"I am sorry that the Houston Rockets didn't have the confidence in me that the Baltimore Bullets have," Hayes said early today. "They are going to play me at center and move a great center like Wes Unseld to forward."

Football

LUBBOCK, Tex. — Each of the four quarterbacks who will take part in tonight's coaches All-America game, the first football contest of the season, has his own special talents.

So it will not take a super scout to figure out what is most likely to occur when either Derry Tagge, Jack Mildren, Paul Miller or Joe Gilliam enter the game televised on channels 7 and 13, 5:30 p.m. PDT.

sisters. He was just idly cycling around the south county, his mother relates, when members of the Marin Cyclists club spotted potential and encouraged him to compete.

Waldteufel has had no coach, but nonetheless has developed into a fine racer. "Waldteufel's style is so deceptive," cycling journalist Owen Mulholand once commented. "To look at him one can hardly realize how fast he is going because no matter what the pace, his position is perfect and style utterly relaxed."

Waldteufel also has drawn praise as an effective team rider, a skill which will be much in demand in the Olympics.

He selected road racing because it was "more adventuresome and much less boring" than conventional track racing, his mother said.

Now he finds that the path of adventure leads to Munich.

Jim Schmidt of El Paso, Tex., at 11.

Four doubles teams with Marin County participants played yesterday, but none survived.

Bowker and Williams did part of the damage themselves, disposing of Dick Dresel of Greenbrae and his partner, Stan Altshuler of San Francisco, 6-3, 6-0, before losing to Kierbow and Reed in the quarter-finals.

Bob Seymour of Mill Valley and Larry Ross of Pasadena were defeated by Greg Grant of Phoenix, Ariz., and De Witts, 6-3, 6-0. The winners then went on to lose to Landin and Schmidt, 3-6, 6-4, 6-4.

Hugh Tierney of Tiburon and Ed Atkinson of Los Angeles defaulted to Landin and Schmidt.

In singles, third-seeded Clif Mayne of Lafayette and fourth-seeded Reed were ousted in upsets.

Mayne lost to De Witts, who the day before also had disposed of seventh-seeded Leoncito Collas of Carmel. De Witts won a rugged match, 6-7, 7-5, 6-3.

Reed lost to Schmidt, 6-3, 2-6, 6-4.

Landin had a difficult time subduing fifth-seeded Tom Borwn of San Francisco, 3-6, 6-3, 6-3, while Hagist swept past Don Gale of Mountain View, 6-3, 6-2.

It remains to be seen whether the special magic De Witts has against seeded players also applies when he meets the unseeded Hagist.

BIRTHDAY QUIZ

By GORDON B. GREB

Try this quiz today, June 24, on the birthday of Jack Dempsey (1895-), heavyweight boxing champion.

T F 1. One of the most exciting prize fighters of all time, William Harrison (Jack) Dempsey became known as "the Manassa Mauler" in tribute to his birthplace and aggressive style.

T F 2. Scrappy Jack began boxing in western mining camps at the age of 17 and was in a world heavyweight title fight by the time he was 24, knocking out Jess Willard in the third round for the victory.

T F 3. Champion for seven years, Dempsey took on challenger Georges Carpentier in 1921 in a New Jersey match which drew boxing's first million-dollar gate.

T F 4. Now 77, Jack Dempsey lives at the Old Soldier's Home in Montclair, N.J. and seldom visits New York City because he is afraid of being mugged.

ANSWERS

1. TRUE — Dempsey was born at Manassa, Colorado.
2. TRUE — He knocked Willard down seven times in the first round.
3. TRUE — Dempsey beat Carpentier before 80,183 fight fans.
4. FALSE — Chances are good you can still see Jack Dempsey at his New York City restaurant.

GIVES HAND AWAY

West opened the deuce of clubs, and declarer gave away his hand by playing the king of clubs from dummy. He might just as well have taken the queen of clubs out of his hand and waved it under the noses of his opponents.

If South didn't have the queen of clubs he would surely finesse dummy's jack of clubs at the first trick. South would reason that the opening leader might have the queen of clubs but surely not the ace of clubs.

WITH AN ACE

East took the first trick with the ace of clubs and saw at a glance that South would be able to discard a spade from dummy on his queen of clubs. If South had the ten of clubs, he would be able to discard both of dummy's spades.

RISKY RETURN

East could see also that a spade return from his king was risky, but it was a case of now or never. He therefore returned the deuce of spades. This enabled the defenders to take their two spade tricks, and East eventually got two trump tricks to defeat the contract by two tricks.

Now see what happens if South plays the jack of clubs from dummy at the first trick. East wins and may well fail to see the hurry about leading spades.

SOUTH CAN MAKE

If East returns the queen of diamonds, which looks so "normal," South makes the contract.

South takes the ace of diamonds, leads a club to the king, gets to his hand with the ace of trumps and cashes his good clubs to discard both spades from dummy. The rest would be easy

Defensive Medical Practices Debunked

DURHAM, N.C. (UPI)—A Duke University study indicates there is little basis for the frequently heard claim that large numbers of doctors are practicing medicine "defensively" to guard themselves against the threat of malpractice suits.

The study, conducted by the Duke Law Journal, concludes that malpractice litigation has been much overrated as a contributor to rising health care costs. Those who say so maintain doctors practicing defensive medicine over-utilize diagnostic tests and procedures, just to be on the safe side in case a patient sues.

Movie Bill Hit

MANILA (UPI) —Movie producers and theater owners are up in arms over a senate bill limiting the importation of foreign films. Guillermo de Vega, chairman of the Board of Censors for Motion Pictures, favors it. He said a certain cutback on foreign film imports would be an incentive to local film producers.

What Happened To Merit System?

Back in the last century, the way to get on the public payroll was to work for the winning politician. Whoever won election "took care of his friends," and this meant finding jobs for some of their more indigent relatives.

The duty of the ward boss was to see that the "right people" got the public jobs. He was the hiring agent, the go-between. The good ward boss was one who looked after just about every family in his bailiwick, making sure that all got at least some small favor from the government. Then, when election rolled around, he could tell them how to vote

Things aren't like that any more, but . . .

THE "SPOILS SYSTEM" came under fire early in the nation's political history, but was defended as hotly as it was attacked. Its defenders claimed that it was democratic: it prevented an entrenched bureaucracy which could take over control of the nation.

Mostly, it was attacked by the "outs" and defended by the "ins." When the "outs" got in, they proved reticent about doing away with the political patronage they had attacked when they were out.

Scandals about the waste of public funds in the Civil War and the years that followed it fueled the fight of "civil service reformers," however, and a "merit system" for federal employees was at last established by the Pendleton Act of 1884.

Now, said the reformers confidently, there'd be no more waste of public funds from the inefficiencies and corruption of political appointees.

It took longer to get rid of the "spoils system" at state, county and local levels. But repeated scandals helped the reformers there, too. By the middle of the present century, nearly all state and most county and local governments had adopted some form of civil service "merit system."

AS GOVERNORS, county supervisors, mayors and local board members stripped themselves of the power to appoint, they set up civil service commissions, supposedly non-partiuan, to exercise that power in their stead. And appointed administrators (almost always exempt from civil service requirements) became the executive secretaries of these commissions and, in effect, the appointing officers.

Elaborate job classifications and examination systems were set up under civil service — becoming more elaborate as the size of governments increased. More and more, to get a public job it became necessary to pass an exam. More and more, the exams became the kind turned out by testing services for grading on computers. More and more, promotion came to be based on years of education, plus passing the exam — plus the personal choice of the administrator.

The result has been the entrenched bureaucracy that the oldtime defenders of the "spoils system" feared. And how much it has increased efficiency is open to question.

NO LONGER CAN the ward boss get Bill Soakes, the village drunk, on the county road crew because Bill and his family will "vote right." But Bill's cousin, Sam Workes, may also be denied a county road crew job for failure to pass a written examination that has little or nothing to do with the work to be performed. Instead, the job is likely to go to someone who does not even live in the county —which as recently as two decades ago was almost universally forbidden by ordinance.

Loyalty to the elected office holder used to be a requirement for promotion. It is so no longer; but loyalty to the appointed administrator (who never has to answer to the voters) may be just as much a requirement. He, not the ward heeler, is now the real political boss.

As for efficiency, the rapid growth of government employment at all levels — much faster than the growth of population — scarcely speaks well for the bureaucratic system.

As for waste and corruption, they are with us still —though hidden much better than in the bad old days.

THE REMEDY of "civil service reform" has proved somewhat less than the panacea its promoters believed it would be.

Yet when any criticism is leveled at the present system, the abuses of the bad old days are trotted out in horror to prove that we must stick with what we have.

That is pretty asinine. The choice is not return to the "spoils system." The choice is to overhaul civil service so that we have a merit system in fact as well as name.

Really, we have never had civil service reform. But we surely need it.

— BRYCE W. ANDERSON

Tortoise Wins Again

The tortoise won over the diamond-back rattler and the horned toad as official California state reptile. In the popularity contest, the doughty, unflappable tortoise proved himself as adept at winning as his ancestor had been in his famous race with the hare.

Even in the Legislature, where strange deals are often made, the odds against the diamond-back rattler must have been very great indeed. Most people just don't care for venomous snakes. The horned toad must have come close to winning, however, They are strangely appealing creatures, kind of pocket-size dinosaurs. As kids we used to keep a couple as pets.

Only one question: who needs a state reptile? Are we being mammalian-chauvinists if we think the bear will do and that the Legislature might find more pertinent problems to concern itself with? Perhaps, after all, there is something symbolic of our creeping legislative machinery in the choice.

Marin Fortunate In Music Programs

As the recipient of this year's Marin Symphony Association Memorial Scholarship, I am naturally most grateful. Besides this, I want to express my gratitude to the Marin Symphony for the opportunity they offer all the young people of Marin County to participate in and to be exposed to music. After a year's study of music in the East, I have had the opportunity to compare and I feel the people of Marin are fortunate to have such outstanding music programs as Music for Minors, Workshop for Strings, Marin Youth Orchestra and Orchestra Piccola, sponsored by the Marin Symphony Association. Without their help and encouragement this opportunity would be lost to the youth of Marin.

Marin's Ridiculous Rents Unwarranted

The rents in Marin County are completely ridiculous. For $350 to $500 and up a month, they add "no pets, no children." For what they have to offer at that price, they should allow children and a baby elephant.

People with children and pets are much more reliable than irresponsible people. I've been in this county on and off since 1934 and the increase in rents is beyond all reason. No increase in taxes warrants the outlandish raise in rents.

Marin County was always noted for not wanting poor or average income families, only the filthy rich can afford to live here. Fortunately I have one landlord in a million. He appreciates care of his property rather than some tenant who demolishes his property at twice the rent. He's not penny wise and pgund foolish.

Cruelty To Horses Involved In Rodeos

In Monday's edition of the Independent-Journal, you published a picture of a bucking horse, and rider, from the Novato to Horsemen's Rodeo. It was described as "the essence of rodeo."

Did you happen to observe the cinch so cruelly tightened around the horse's loins that the poor animal was in such agony that it "bucked" in an attempt to free itself from the punishment? Did you look closely at the horse's face and see that this was no wild horse, but one in extremes of suffering? If your photographer had visited the "wild" animals — horses and steers — in their pens after the rodeo, he would have found quiet — and badly hurt —animals. The picture itself tells the story. Those men lounging close by would assuredly not have been so near to a dangerous horse.

The Humane Society of the United States is fighting to have such cruel exploitation of animals banned. . .

I notice the Independent-Journal is publicizing a county fair, with many pretty young girls — and a rodeo. Will your paper spare some thought for the animals used in the rodeo, and investigate their treatment?

Citizens Ignored On HAFB Joint Use

On June 13, I attended the county board of supervisors' meeting and the Novato City Council meeting. In both instances my interest was the joint use of Hamilton Air Force Base.

I left both meetings feeling that the citizens of Novato were not to be consulted on this matter. I also found it most interesting at the Novato City Council meeting that everyone stopped talking when a jet flew over — the noise being such no one could be heard. In all honesty I must ask if that type of noise is really what Novatans wish to be subjected to in much greater density than it is now.

I am convinced that a goodly number of Novatans are opposed to a commercial airport in our backyard and we must let the powers that be know of our opposition. It would seem that the time has come for the formation of a citizens group to formally oppose this action. I will gladly volunteer my time.

Bugging Of Democrats' HQ Case Of Protective Reaction

WASHINGTON — The arrest of five men in the Democratic National Committee headquarters last week-end has caused a great deal of consternation in high Republican circles. All leading officials deny they had any knowledge of the incident, which was planned and executed by tha same people who gave us the Bay of Pigs.

While most people are mystified as to how it was possible that high Republican figures did not know of the raid, it was easily explained to me by a friend who is very close to yhe Republican Party.

"THE DECISION to raid the Democratic National Committee headquarters in Washington was made as a protective reaction strike. We knew the Democrats were massing a buildup for an attack on the Republicans in July, and it was in our interests to destroy their files before they were used against us."

"But wasn't this raid a violation of the presidential orders not to bug the enemy's telephones unless the Republicans were attacked first?"

"The general in the field who made the decision may have gone beyond the literal intention of the rules, but he believed his actions were justified on the basis of intelligence reports that the Democrats were going to invade Miami."

"But at the time the raid was made, the Democratic Party headquarters was considered off limits as a target area," I said. "Surely high Republican officials must have been aware of what was going on."

"As far as the high officials were concerned, they had no knowledge of the raid: In fact, they had given out strict orders that illegal strikes against the Democrats had to be cleared with them. Somehow communications got fouled up, which can happen during an election year."

"DO YOU BELIEVE a raid of this type, if successful, could have changed the outcome in November?"

"We are fighting a tough, ruthless enemy who will stop at nothing to impose its type of government on the American people," he said. "We cannot sit idly by and allow them to take over the White House.

"Perhaps we didn't play by all the rules of the game, but I can assure you the Democrats are not playing by the rules either. This incident has been blown all out of proportion.

"Had the raid succeeded no one would have said a word. But because it failed, everyone is up in arms. Instead of criticizing the people behind the attack, I think they should be congratulated for putting their party first."

"BUT," I SAID, "aren't you escalating the election by bugging the Democrats, and photographing their files?"

"We did not escalate the election. They did. They're the ones who are trying to kick us out. Their leaders have said as much. The President has said many times he would agree to a cease-fire, providing the Democrats give up their political ambitions. But the honor of the presidency is at stake, and Mr. Nixon has no intention of giving the country away."

"Will the Republicans court-martial the people responsible for the raid on Democratic headquarters?"

"No, but they will be demoted and put on a pension."

"That's tough," I said.

"Perhaps. But their worst punishment is that they will never be allowed to bug for the Republican Party again."

MARQUIS CHILDS

VIP Round-Trippers Curious Way To Run Foreign Policy

WASHINGTON — The Nixon administration is up in the air, almost literally that is. So many administration types are flying around the world in presidential-planes for one reason or another or for no apparent reason at all that a White House coordinator must surely be regulating the traffic pattern.

Henry Kissinger bats back and forth across the oceans like a ping-pong ball. His secret and nonsecret missions have the appeal of a first-rate international thriller. And when he surfaces it is with the aplomb and the humor of a James Bond.

The former secretary of the treasury, John B. Connally, is sent by the president to a long list of ports of call in Latin America, Europe and Africa. This might be described as a goodwill mission except that Connally's specialty out of his tough Texas background is hardly anything as genteel as good will. Stern truth telling is his bag, as quite a few governments discovered when he masterminded the president's program to get the dollar back in shape again last August.

Why he should be making this 15-nation tour is the subject of a lot of conjecture. The best guess is that the president is readying him for one or the other of two jobs — as a replacement for Vice President Spiro T. Agnew in November or as secretary of state to take over when William P. Rogers gives up the burden.

CURIOUSER AND CURIOUSER, as Alice said in that other wonderland, is the tour that Gov. Ronald Reagan is making for the president. Reagan, who did a once-over-lightly in Asia, with a visit of condolence to Chiang Kai-shek, is now going to western Europe. His schedule calls for stops in Denmark, Belgium, France, Italy, Britain, Ireland, and possibly Spain. What the governor can possibly say on such a grand tour is hard to see. Heads of government and foreign ministers complain that with so many touring American VIPs, the currency has been debased.

In the cynical view it is just a yen for travel in the high style. You see the world at the taxpayers' expense in a big luxurious jet. You can take with you secretaries, public relations aides, family, friends and assorted hand holders. On arrival you are never troubled with passports, customs, taxis, the inconveniences that worry the ordinary traveler. Distinguished greeters meet you and you are transported by official limousine to a stately guest house. And you are never concerned about airline pilots' strikes.

As though to redress the balance, Secretary Rogers, who has so often played the role of the forgotten man, is going on a blockbuster that sounds like "calling all planes." He is due shortly for Australia and a SEATO council meeting, Indonesia, Ceylon, Bahrein, Greece, Rumania, Hungary, Yugoslavia — and the ticket is still open.

NOW ALL THIS travel may bring benefits that are not immediately visible. Certainly, Marco Polo Kissinger racks up an impressive score, which his modesty does not restrain him from making rather generally known. If it were just on the score of sheer stamina he would set a world's record.

But when all this is said, another question is deeply troubling to the working stiffs who carry out foreign policy in the field. They wonder about the orderly processes of government that seem more often than not to get lost in the going and coming of a few men at the very top.

This is one reason for the demoralization within the State Department and the Foreign Service. Anyone on assignment abroad has good reason to know how many able officers there are at the second and third levels. They feel they are not clued in. They see the top posts go to fat cats who have little background for ambassadorial jobs. Moreover, these ambassadors by virtue of big contributions to the political party in power are jealous and resentful of the career officers who try to keep routine embassy affairs going.

Nixon Learns To Manage Press By Keeping Reporters Away

By RICHARD L. STROUT

WASHINGTON — Franklin Roosevelt had two press conferences a week; Mr. Nixon has had one formal press conference in a little more than a year — on June 1, 1971.

The press has lots of things it cares to ask Mr. Nixon about: a seeming discrepancy of interpretation over the Moscow arms talks between Defense Secy. Melvin Laird and the State Department; what the government plans to do to prevent further unauthorized bombings on Vietnam such as have just been exposed — these and scores of other questions about the economy, welfare, and taxes.

In Los Angeles, President Nixon's domestic affairs adviser, John D. Erlichman, explained that one reason the President has few news conferences is that newsmen ask such dumb questions. According to wire services, Mr. Erlichman said: "He doesn't get very good questions at a press conference, frankly. He goes in there for a half hour and gets a lot of flabby and fairly dumb questions and it doesn't really elucidate very much. I've seen him many times come off one of those things and go back in and say, "isn't it extraordinary how poor the quality of the questions are?' "

THE WHITE HOUSE press corps that followed Mr. Nixon to Peking and Moscow has been asking for a chance to question Mr. Nixon for some weeks. But the President has developed a style of communicating with the public by making maximum use of TV exposure which takes him directly into the homes of the country without the intermediary of the press.

Mr. Nixon held two impromptu news conferences this year, Feb. 10 and March 24 — called on short notice so that none other than the regular 20 or 30 White House reporters was present. (At a regularly scheduled press conference, several hundred may attend.)

Mr. Nixon is one of the hardest working and aloof presidents of the century. In his book "Who Owns America?" former Interior Secy. Walter J. Hickel tells how he was dropped after he wrote a letter to Mr. Nixon seeking an appointment and suggesting the President meet individually with cabinet members.

Supporters say Mr. Nixon must husband his energy and they point to his success in breaking the ice with China and Russia as examples.

Columnists Rowland Evans Jr. and Robert D. Novak in their book "Nixon in the White House" say that Mr. Nixon prepared himself for press conferences when he held them, as did no other president: "He worked his press conferences with neither notes nor podium; his steel-trap mind could comprehend difficult concepts and memorize great quantities of facts."

The authors felt that Mr. Nixon is aloof and that his "isolation" is "more pronounced than any president's since Hoover — isolation from the press, from most of his aides, from his cabinet."

THE RATIONALE of a White House press conference makes it a two-way affair in which the President gives information, and also learns from questions asked him what the public is thinking. The regular White House press conference has been all but institutionalized in Washington — from its slow evolution back in the days of Wilson, Coolidge, and Harding. It has frequently been likened to the question period in the British House of Commons.

Elimination of critical questions by the press, particularly in regularly scheduled conferences, is new.

The relation of president to press is normally an adversary one. Executives like Franklin D. Roosevelt and Robert F. Kennedy used it to their advantage.

Mr. Nixon has easily managed to dominate the news while ignoring press conferences.

In a characteristic 18-day period, from May 2 to May 20, Mr. Nixon on TV: extolled J. Edgar Hoover in the face of the "very vicious attack" of unnamed critics; announced the mining of Haiphong harbor; commented on the shooting of Governor Wallace; announced the resignation of Treasury Secy. John B. Connally; visited Governor Wallace; and spoke for 25 minutes to journalists at a reception prior to the Moscow trip. (Presidential adviser Henry A. Kissinger gave the briefing on the Moscow trip.)

Although reporters danced with excitement over some of these events, direct questions were not permitted at any time.

President Nixon, however, has found new methods of reaching directly to the public, has evolved ways of using his office to dominate the news without the intervention of exploratory or critical or "dumb" questions.

Soling Sails On San Francisco Bay

There's A New Sailboat On The Bay

Created especially for the 1972 Olympics, the Soling has already earned widespread international acceptance, and has attained a particular popularity with the skippers of Northern California.

By DON KEOWN

Four years ago Marin County was without representation in the Olympic Games. But things could be very different in 1972.

Along with ace swimmer Rick DeMonte, cyclist Emile Waldteufel and some power-punching Hamilton Air Force Base boxers, Marin County yachtsmen loom as strong Olympic "possibles" who will be making their bids when final American trials are held in the next few weeks for three boating classes on San Francisco Bay.

The final American trials in three of the Olympic classes will be conducted during the next few weeks on San Francisco Bay.

Marinites competing for the right to go to Munich, Germany, and represent Uncle Sam against the world's best sailors will not only enjoy the advantage of sailing on their home waters in those fical trials, but they will also enter that competition with some of the best reputations and records in yachting circles.

THE SOLING Class, with its seven-race series to determine the American winner scheduled for the bay Friday through July 7 under San Francisco Yacht Club sponsorship, is one class where Marinites can be expected to mount a strong bid.

Two Marin skippers, Warwick Tompkins and Gerald Rumsey, have survived the Soling eliminations to qualify for the American finals as part of the San Francisco Bay Fleet's contingent.

American finals are also being held here through Thursday for the 29-foot Dragon Class under Richmond Yacht Club auspices, the July 8-15 for the 22½-foot Star Class under St. Francis Yacht Club sponsorship.

THE SOLINGS are 27-foot, three-man keel boats that will be making their Olympic debut in 1972.

Even before the 1968 games had taken place, the Olympic Committee had sent forth an open call for yacht designers to submit their plans for a fast, maneuverable three-man keel boat in the 27-foot class to supplant a larger class that was becoming too expensive for the international competition.

Numerous designers answered the call, and the Olympic officials chose from among their designs the Soling, the brainchild of a Norwegian naval architect, Yon Hermin Linge, who had worked out his blueprints especially for the Olympic specifications. Linge was then virtually unknown as a nautical designer, but he has since created a second class, the Scampi, that has also received wide acceptance.

THE SOLING has enjoyed a burst of popularity in the U.S. that will reach a climax on

Soling Sailors Aim At Olympics

Marin Skippers In The Running

Friday when a field of from 50 to 70 of the boats is expected to begin competition that will determine the single entry allotted America in the games later in the year in Germany.

The sports section of the New York Times under the headline "Eastern Seaboard Alive With Olympic Aspirants" reported on the preparations for the Olympic trials by two of the East's top Soling sailors, Sam Merrick and Stuart Walker, both of whom have been doing their training out of Annapolis, Md.

"Gentlemen, but nonetheless tooth-and-nail rivals," the Times described them. They are fellow members of the Severn Sailing Assn. of Annapolis.

AND, REPORTED the Times, in his determination to win the Olympic berth, Merrick early this past winter switched over from a weekend training schedule and took a leave of absence from his job to enable him to train the full week.

Merrick, Walker and others in training at Annapolis, the Times noted, are not unique. "All over the country, in many countries of the world, sailors of every persuasion and shade of experience are gunning their tillers for the big push (to the Olympics)."

Marin's Warwick Tompkins — "the commodore," his sailing friends and rivals call him — and his En Passant rate among the strong pre-trials favorites. The other Marin hope, Rumsey, and his Nooner loom as a dark horse threat. Jim Coggan, Jim DeWitt and Dave Sharpnack are the other San Francisco Bay skippers still in the running.

LOWELL NORTH of San Diego is one prime favorite, as is Bud Melgas, coming from Wisconsin. Several other easterners are likely to be in strong contention against the best of the West.

The popularity of the Soling, however, is by no means restricted to Olympic aspirants.

Something like 35 of the boats are currently berthed around San Francisco Bay, and many can be seen on its waters on any fine weekend day. But of late the biggest concentrations were to be found skimming along the so-called Berkeley Circle just off the shoals and side pier. There the Solings, and the other Olympic class boats, can be sailed by skippers and crews under true Olympic trials conditions, a triangular six-mile course that causes them to beat (against the wind), reach (off the wind) and run (with the wind) as they make two changes of direction.

PRACTICE RUNS and local eliminations have become ever more frequent and more serious as the trials draw closer.

But one of the most enthusiastic advocates of the Soling in Marin is not even eligible for

THE NEW SOLING CLASS sailboat, designed specifically for the 1972 Olympics competition, is an eye-appealing as well as an efficient craft. Here three of the Solings present a pleasant picture on San Francisco Bay. They are just under 27 feet in length with a 63-inch beam, and carry 233 square feet of sail. Easily maneuverable, they are fast, planing easily in a 20-knot wind.

the Olympics. He is a professional, an instructor of sailing — Gary Faulk.

So sold is Faulk on the Soling that his "fleet" of instructional craft at his Gary Faulk Sailing School on Harbor Drive at Sausalito's Clipper Yacht Harbor consists of two Solings, soon to be joined by a third, even though he admits he would be able tg purchase three boats of another class acceptable for the teaching of sailing for the $6,000 a single Soling costs him.

SINCE HE won't be vying for that coveted Olympic berth, why this extra expenditure of $4,000 per boat to acquire a Soling?

"The Soling," replies Faulk, "is a very high-performance, well-equipped boat, capable of use in teaching not only the novice but the advanced yachtsman as well. I think it helps every sailing student, regardless of his experience, to do his learning in something that is extremely good. The Soling is that."

Faulk describes the Soling as "a very fast boat and very pretty, 27 feet long, five-feet-plus wide, with a central cockpit in the middle of the boat, and carrying main, jib and spinnaker sails."

IT IS LARGE enough to meet his needs for a boat that is demanding of his students, and yet more maneuverable, more responsive to the skipper's control than a larger, clumsier boat with a big cabin on it.

Whenever Faulk has an advanced student who desires to sharpen his racing skills, then the instructor has the perfect craft for such lessons.

But the majority of his pupils, Faulk says, are Bay Area residents who already own their own boats and simply want to better their general or basic seamanship and improve their knowledge of boating safety.

THE SOLING, made of fiberglass, is distinctive, Faulk says, in that it must be an absolutely exact boat if it is to qualify for competition. "In other words, the molds are all taken from the same plug."

No deviation whatsoever is allowed in thicknesses, in weights, in construction methods. The slightest mistake — a keel poured just a bit too heavy by the manufacturer, or some minor modification made by an owner — could result in the disqualification of a Soling from serious competition such as the Olympic trials.

Why these stricter standards than are applied to some other older sailboat classes?

"IT IS A new class, and designers and builders have just learned that this is the better way of doing it," Faulk answers simply.

Gary Faulk, born in San Diego and educated in Southern California, began his own association with sailing as a boy at the San Diego Yacht Club when he started maneuvering an eight-foot Sabit pram. Within a short time he was crewing on other people's boats.

From his early racing in Southern California waters, he came to the Bay Area 15 years ago as a 20-year-old and first entered the boating business with Coleman Boat and Plastics in Sausalito, builders of the first large fiberglass boat, the 41-foot sloop Bounty II.

From laminator in the factory, Faulk worked up to salesman for the Bay Area. He became a yacht broker and dealer in new boats, and opened his own manufacturing company specializing in experimental design and fiberglass construction.

HE OPENED his own sailing school the first of this year, after teaching sailing part-time for a number of years.

Of the Bay Area, he says: "It is just about the best classroom for teaching sailing available today. On Richardson Bay you have the constant, lighter breezes. On San Francisco Bay you have the less consistent, often very strong winds. You can fit the conditions to your students and to the lessons for the day."

Of the Soling, Faulk says: "It's the best and fastest keel boat in the world."

Dr. James Coggan, San Francisco dentist and Soling Fleet captain for San Francisco Bay, is equally enthusiastic about the Scandinavian-born craft.

THERE ARE, he says, nearly 500 Solings plying waters around the world today, built by manufacturers in 20 countries. Solings are to be found in at least 20 berths in the United States alone.

The Soling, says Dr. Coggan, planes easily in a 20-knot wind. Its actual overall length is 26 feet nine inches, with a 20-foot length at water level. It has a keel weight of 1,280 pounds, a maximum beam of 63 inches, a draft of four feet three inches, and a displacement of 2,200 pounds. It carries a sail area of 233 square feet.

And, in the minds of Jim Coggan, Gary Faulk and other Soling enthusiasts, it is just about the niftiest thing afloat.

Olympic competition will actually be held at Kiel, some 500 miles north of Munich where most of the games will take place.

THE BAY AREA Soling sailors will be hard put next weekend and through the following week to stave off the challenge of the invading Soling skippers and crewmen from other regions, determined to win the right to represent Uncle Sam in Germany.

Whether the local favorites succeed or not in that endeavor, however, the Soling is definitely on San Francisco Bay to stay.

Its sails are going to be sighted more and more often. Sometimes there will be novices in control, under the watchful eyes of instructor Gary Faulk. And at other times the handsome craft will be handled by experts of the international caliber of Warwick Tompkins and Gerald Rumsey.

But novice or expert at the helm, the Soling is more than equal to the demands placed upon her. And Yon Hermin Linge is not longer an unknown name among naval architects.

SAILING BEGAN for Gary Faulk as a boy in Southern California with an eight-foot Sabit pram. He has been a boat salesman, broker and manufacturer, and now he is a full-time professional sailing instructor. And in the new Soling he has found his favorite sailboat of all-time.

Marin Fair Manager Marcelle McCoy Keeps Her Calm In Midst Of Flurry

By MARY LEYDECKER

"All the men I've had to consult through the years talk to me like I understand — not like I'm a misplaced housewife."

In these words, Marin's longtime county fair manager, Marcelle B. McCoy, summed up one of the joys of a career she entered by chance about 15 years ago.

Since then, the attractive mother of two grown sons has been a familiar figure at Marin's fairs — held for many years in the Marin Art and Garden Center in Ross, and moved last year to new fairgrounds on the Civic Center in Santa Venetia.

AS EACH FAIR nears readiness, Mrs. McCoy can usually be found whipping about in a golf cart, attending to a multiplicity of details.

Sometimes the electrical outlets aren't where fair participants want them — one year a water main broke creating a "lake" which some fairgoers thought was part of the decor — last year the wail "where can I wash my hands" was constantly heard.

Through all of her dealings, with impassive workmen and excitable artists alike, Mrs. McCoy speaks in a calm voice.

WHEN THE FAIR opens, there is usually not only order and serenity but also a quality of magic unique to Marin County fairs.

In her office at the Civic Center last week, Mrs. McCoy's bright hazel eyes sparkled as she spoke of plans for this year's fair, the second to be held on the land adjacent to the Civic Center lagoon.

She described the fair, scheduled for Labor Day weekend, as a continuation but expansion of last year's affair. "There will be more food, more garden areas, more booths, a larger art show and more diversity of attractions," she enumerated.

Even after the many years in the lush tree-shaded grounds of the Marin Art and Garden Center, Mrs. McCoy was not appalled as trying to turn the somewhat barren property at the Civic Center into a fitting home for the fair.

There were certainly problems, as Mrs. McCoy is the first to admit — mainly the lack of water. But by the time the fair opened, visitors were pleasantly surprised with the setting by the lagoon which had been enhanced with instant gardens.

IN THE OLD setting, the fairs had different themes each year, since the Art and Garden Center "was an easy place to express a theme because it had a permanent identity as a garden."

"Now we have an identity with that beautiful auditorium," Mrs. McCoy said of the Marin Veterans Memorial Building at the Civic Center. "If this (new) fair has something truly different, it's that building."

It was Mrs. McCoy's idea to start a film competition last year at the new fair site, housing it in the new theater. The competition was a huge success, she said, and will be enlarged this year.

"EVERY TIME we add something different, I learn something new," she added. "I can't say that I have any particular expertise, but the men talk to me like I understand — not like I'm a misplaced housewife."

Coping with sewers and electricity doesn't frighten Mrs. McCoy — she said she's always been intrigued by construction.

Her career as one of three women managing California fairs began in the early 1950s when Mrs. McCoy was a housewife, rearing two young sons.

Through an interest in the Ross Valley Players, she got involved as a volunteer in a "little fiesta" held at the Marin Art and Garden Center. It was the forerunner of the county fair.

THE LATE CIVIC and conservation leader Caroline Livermore was credited by Mrs. McCoy for the first real fair, which "grew and grew" through the years.

"Mrs. Livermore knew the state would given us money if we made it into a county fair," she said, "and it was at her urging (much later) that the county bought 160 acres, now the site of the Civic Center.

The 80 acres of that property used for fairgrounds was purchased with parimutuel funds alloted for the Marin fair and accumulated for a number of years.

Looking back through the years, Mrs. McCoy remembers not only the little disasters but also such occasions as riding in a rickshaw in the "Cherry Blossoms in July" fair, her favorite, at the Art and Garden Center.

HOWEVER, IT'S the spirit of "everyone helping each other" that gets the fairs under way each year and which she remembers most fondly.

There's another spirit — that of competition — which Mrs. McCoy believes is part of the reason county fairs all over the state are increasing in attendance each year in a changing society.

"That blue ribbon still means a lot to a winner," she said.

Mrs. McCoy's career as fair manager takes most of her time and energy — but she reserves some of each for gardening in her Lucas Valley home, "where I stick in vegetables and flowers all together."

The Land That Halleck Could Call His Own

Man Who Became Civil War General Had An Earlier Role As Pioneer

By JOHN D. YATES

The rounded summit of Hicks Mountain lies half a mile, and about 1,100 feet up, from the Point Reyes-Petaluma Road called Red Hill Road (its north slope overshadows that excellent Marin Cheese Factory).

From this crest of 1,532 feet you can view as fine a piece of unspoiled real estate as you wil find anywhere. To the west stretch the great hump-backed ridges contoured with cattle tracks and checked at intervals by deep green-edged canadas. The somber colors of manzanita and chapparral which grow between the spurs are in striking contrast to the still wispy withered green of the higher grassy slopes, soon to be deadened and burnished by wind and sun.

To the south rises the forest-laden Inverness Ridge like a massive green wall, and in the foreground Black Mountain in a symmetrical mound (which, when viewed from the southwest, looks like the great closed fist of a reclining giant).

From the left of Black Mountain runs the valley of the Arroya Nicasio which turns away from sight behind the hills towards the town of Nicasio and now forms part of the Nicasio Reservoir.

To the east and southeast there is another great sweep of hills and rugged terrain beginning just across the Red Hill Road, at the foot of Hicks Mountain, with the Arroya Sausal and the Canada Pompini. The ridges and hills in this direction are not so weather-worn and bleak as the country to the west; the ridges are banked with redwoods beyond the first few ranges of hills, and rise to their ultimate crest about nine miles away at the Big Rock, which, except for Tamalpais, is the highest point in Marin County — 1,887 feet.

THIS PANORAMA encompasses part of a 20,000 acre lot — and one of five parcels — that made up the Rancho Nicasio grant. Hicks Mountain stands at one of the many corners of that lot which extended west, and east far beyond Big Rock to an arm that lay between the San Jose Rancho of Ignacio Pacheco and Rancho Santa Margerita, Las Gallinas and San Pedro of Don Timoteo Murphy. This parcel, and another one of approximately 10,000 acres that bordered Tomales Bay, Tomales Estero and Walker Creek (the old Arroya San Antonio), belonged to Gen. Henry Wager Halleck.

In 1848, when surveyor Jasper O'Farrell and his assistant Chester Lyman approached the summit of Hicks Mountain from the great southwestern spur, the view of the sweep of hill and valley was the same as it is today 124 years later — except for the reservoir, the neat ribbons of connecting roads and an occasional ranch building. That unspoiled view is in the range of 25 to 32 miles from Golden Gate Bridge.

Surveying was a profitable occupation for several years after U.S. annexation of Alta California. Surveyors were in great demand, for most of the Mexican grants were substantiated only by vague "disenos" (an amateur artist's impression of an area denoting landmarks, rather than a map), and titles were confirmed and juridical possessions were given to the grantees upon only an imperfect system of measuring as performed by a mounted vacquero armed with such unsophisticated surveying instruments as reatas and mecates (rawhide and hair ropes).

THE NEW masters of the Territory were the exacting and business-like Yankees, and if the "Californios" wished to prove title to their vast holdings in a U.S. court they had better know what they owned — and that precisely.

Jasper O'Farrell had a built-in testimonial for he was a government surveyor appointed by Col. R. B. Mason, the governor, and as a consequence he was able to corner most of the larger surveying jobs in the District of Sonoma (which included Marin County). Chester Lyman received a similar appointment from Governor Mason and assisted O'Farrell in a lot of his private surveying work north of the bay.

HENRY WAGER HALLECK, the owner of 30,849 acres of Rancho Nicasio lands in Marin County, went on to a Civil War career that included his appointment as one of four major-generals of the Union Army in the opening weeks of the conflict; commanding officer of the Department of the Missouri from November, 1861, to March, 1862; commander of the Department of the Mississippi, March, 1862, to July, 1872; general-in-chief of the Armies of the United States, July, 1862, to March, 1864; chief-of-staff, U.S. Army, March of 1864 to April of 1865. He returned to San Francisco as commanding officer of the Pacific Division in 1865, then became commander of the Division of the South in 1869 in Louisville, Ky., where he died in 1872.

FAIR TREATMENT FOR 'A MALIGNED PIONEER'

John D. Yates, who wrote the historical article on this and the following pages, has been a Marin County resident since 1959.

He was born and educated in England, and was in the import-export business in London, Malaysia and San Francisco for 15 years. For another four years he was with the San Francico Art Institute as its director of administration.

For the past year he has been working on a biography of Union Civil War Gen. Henry W. Halleck, to be published under the title "The Life and Times of Henry Wager Halleck . . ."

The material used in this Marin Magazine article was collected by Yates in the preparation of his book manuscript.

The biographer describes Halleck as "one of the most maligned and unheralded of all California pioneers, and unappreciated in his capacity of general-in-chief and chief-of-staff in the political hell of Washington in the 1860s." And, he notes, many Marinites remain unaware of Henry Halleck's close association with their own county's early history.

JOHN D. YATES
Biography in the works

His scheduled book, he says, "will try to set the record straight."

In addition to his work on the Halleck biography, Yates is researching other history projects including the story of "The Commodores of the Pacific Squadron" and a history of California's Ord family.

He is a Terra Linda resident.

and himself a landowner, was to remain in California to gain prominence as a civil engineer and the surveyor of San Francisco. Lyman returned east in the 1850s to become a professor of industrial mechanics and physics at Yale University, and in 1870 he was given the chair of physics and astronomy at that university.

Lyman kept a diary during his sojourn in California and he recorded that O'Farrell's fee for surveying was $10 a mile from which he paid a percentage to his assistant. In the rough country of the Nicasio tract — where they surveyed 56,000 acres in all — and because of the many angles and corners of the outer perimeter and of the boundaries of the separate lots, they would be lucky to cover more than four miles a day; and the boundaries of the five lots exceeded 125 miles.

O'FARRELL TOOK his fee in cash or in kind, or a combination of the two, depending upon the circumstances of the rancher or landowner. He arranged an interesting package for himself in the case of Nicasio — the grantees sold him 9,500 acres for $3,500 in April and September, 1850, and he in turn donated his services. Even if his fees amounted to $1,250 he had still secured some prime land at a bargain, for the going price was $1 an acre. The price paid by Henry Halleck, for lots 1 and 5 amounting to 30,843.92 acres, was $30,000 in May, 1850.

In 1835 Don Mariano Guadalupe Vallejo, military commandant of the frontier of Sonoma, was responsible for the colonization of land within his district now increased in size by the large acreage released by the secularization of the missions. He was directed, or so he claimed, by Gov. Jose Figueroa" . . . to compel the christianized Indians (neophytes) of

THIS FAMOUS map of the Marin County of 1860 shows rancho boundaries. Note the five parcels of Rancho Nicasio that stretch across the county and represent a total of 56,621.11 acres. One of Henry W. Halleck's lots, where the township of Nicasio and Halleck Valley are located, lies right in the middle of the map. The other lot is seen on Tomales Bay with one arm sneaking inland. Note the many angles and corners on each parcel.

The man who was to become the Union Army's Civil War chief-of-staff also played a role in the history and the development of this county.

the ex-mission of San Rafael to make a choice of land . . ."

The governor apparently had received a petition from a group of Indians headed by Teodorico Quilajuequi for lands on which they lived and which they had cultivated; and the tract selected was 71,000 acres (20 square leagues) of land called Nicasio. But Indians, in their ignorance of title documents and the mysterious laws of ownership, were fair game for the machinations and tricks of Castilians as well as Anglo-Saxons, even in those days.

Vallejo transmitted a letter of his own to the Indians in which he quoted a letter of authority from the governor in which title was given to the Indians. But he then confirmed the "Supreme Decree aforementioned" himself, though that was the prerogative of the governor and the Departmental Junta, claiming he held the actual title papers in his own files. Nothing was recorded officially. Since the governor had not been requested to issue a grant, the Secretary of State, the governor and the Departmental Junta all assumed that the lands called Nicasio were still uncommitted.

VALLEJO THUS left himself a number of options and control of 71,000 acres. He could pull the rug out from under the Indians, or confirm their title by just asking the governor to sign a grant — or so he thought.

In 1839 the Indians became worried about their property. They had never seen the title papers and they had heard rumors that they might be dispossessed. They therefore wrote to Gov. J. B. Alvarado, enclosing Vallejo's "title" letter, and asked for reassurance. This they got from Alvarado who noted that they were in actual possession of the land, and suggested that if they were disturbed they should apply to the military commandant of the District — who was, of course, Don Mariano Vallejo. Alvarado, the first "native" governor, could claim no ignorance of the law, for he had just signed a decree granting land called Suisun to another Indian, Francisco Solano, "being worthy of reward of the quietness which he causes to be maintained by that unchristianized people." But he also knew that Vallejo's letter had no validity and that no copy of any title paper existed in the archives in Monterey.

Alvarado must have been a part to some kind of conspiracy — and so he was.

IN 1844 GOV. Manuel Micheltorena received two petitions from white men for the land called Nicasio. The title was clear, according to Secretary of State Jimeno, and the petitioners were granted their tract of land. "I hereby concede to the said Don Pablo De La Guerra 10 Sitios de Ganado Mayor (10 square leagues) in consideralion of services which entitle him to acquire said land; and to Don Juan B. R. Cooper for the relinquishment, which he makes of $4,000, owing to him by the National Treasury; I concede 6 Sitios de Ganado Mayor (six square leagues) . . . the remainder of the said tract (four squre leagues or about 15,000 acres) for the benefit of the Indians . . ."

Don Pablo was the eldest son of Capt. Jose De La Guerra y Noriega, late of the Spanish Army and commandante by royal decree of the Presidio of Santa Barbara. When Mexico severed connections with Spain he resigned his commission and was elected deputado to represent the California Department in Mexico City. For services rendered to the State Captain, Jose received five grants of land in the District of Santa Barbara — an impressive fiefdom of nearly 200,000 acres.

The De La Guerras were proud Castilians and were the most aristocratic of all the Californios; their tastes were worldly and sophisticated, and the sons received expensive educations in England and Europe. Don Pablo became collector of customs in Monterey, and his petition for Nicasio was favored for this service as a civil officer.

JUAN B. R. COOPER was already a landowner in the Sonoma District (in Marin County) of Rancho Punta de San Quentin, and he was a Mexican citizen. He was the half brother of Thomas O. Larkin and a successful trader. He became involved in a joint trading venture with the Mexican governor who became his debtor to the tune of $4,000. The note was torn up, and his petition for the Nicasio lands was approved.

It seems that the grantees had not intention of settling on the land or even making basic improvements as required by the official decree. Don Pablo, the sophisticate, had no wish to rusticate in the country while John Cooper was totally absorbed in his trading activities. They called upon O'Farrell to survey the land, and to subdivide it into lots for easy sale.

De La Guerra took up lots one and five which he sold to Henry Halleck in 1850; O'Farrell gained possession of 9,500 acres of lot three as mentioned before; and Cooper took up lots two and four, 16,293.37 acres, and sold them to Benjamin Buckelew. In 1851 O'Farrell sold his acreage to James Black for $2,000 with a swap of land in Sonoma.

Meanwhile in the Vallejo camp a plot had been hatched by Don Mariano and the now ex-Governor Alvarado to deprive the Indians of the entire Nicasio tract, which was still thought to be 20 square leagues and intact. By means of 'firewater' and double talk the Indians were persuaded to sell the entire tract for $1,000 to Alvarado, but they were to retain grazing and cultivation rights. The phony conveyance was signed by the Indians and Alvarado and endorsed by Jacob Leese, the Sonoma alcalde.

BUT THE INDIANS had no legal title to the land they had conveyed, so the shrewd Vallejo formally petitioned Governor Micheltorena for Nicasio "on behalf" of the Indians. The governor deferred to the Secretary of State, Jimeno, who was quick to remind His Excellency that the tract had been granted to De La Guerra and Cooper. The whole shabby scheme was inadvertently revealed to Jimeno because Vallejo had enclosed Alvarado's original title letter to the Indians with his petition. Jimeno, in writing to the governor, disclosed the graceless conspiracies of Vallejo and Alvarado.

The poor Indians ended up with only four leagues, or that portion left over from the Micheltorena grants to De La Guerra and Cooper.

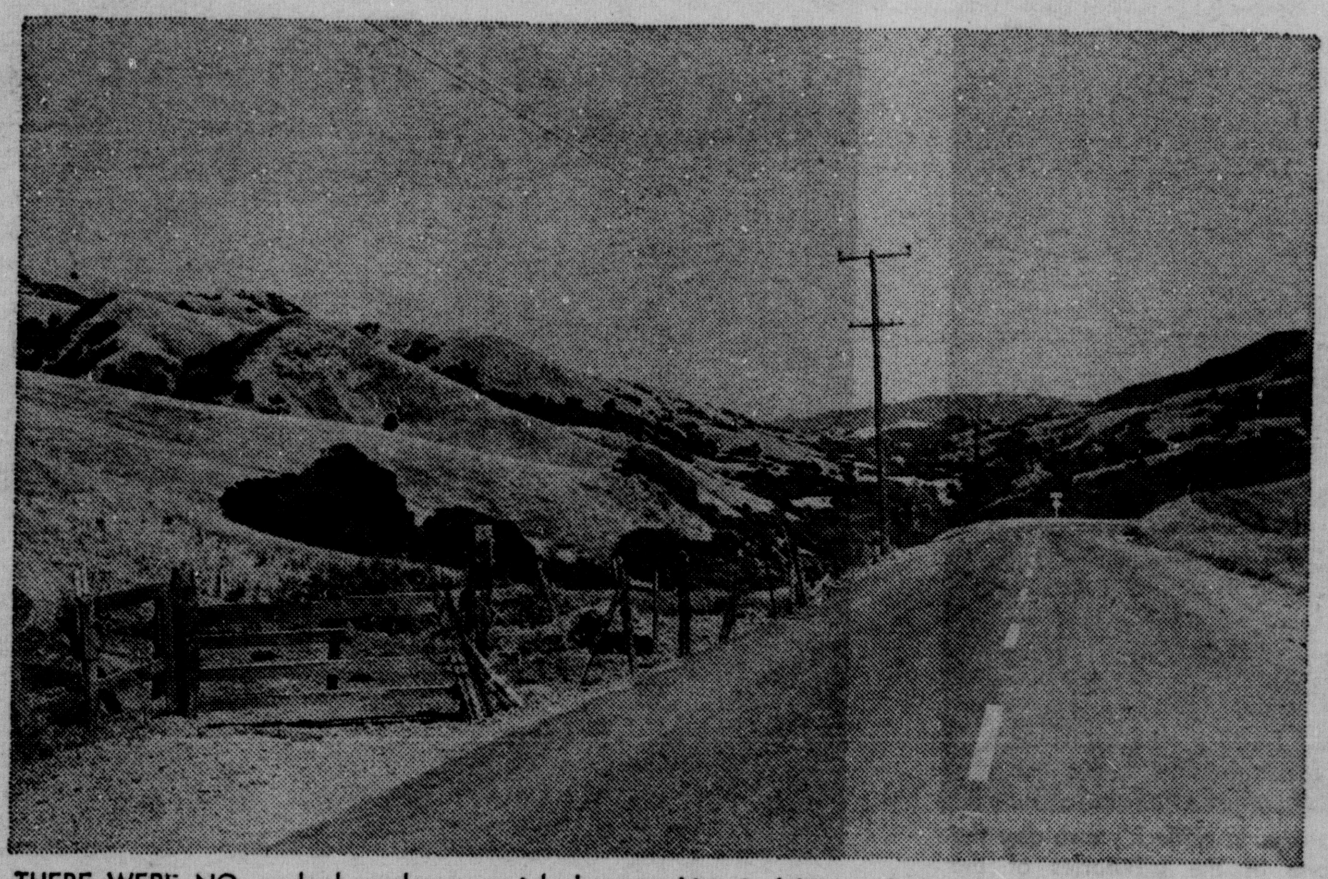
ONE OF THE original grantees of Rancho Nicasio was Don Pablo De La Guerra who sold nine square leagues of Nicasio lands to Henry W. Halleck and one square league to Jasper O'Farrell. De La Guerra was the scion of an aristocratic Castilian family, his father, Capt. Jose De La Guerra y Noriega having been the Spanish-appointed commandante of the Presidio of Santa Barbara. Don Pablo was English-educated, and a Mexican alcalde, customs inspector, state senator, friend of Halleck and associate of the Halleck law firm.



THERE WERE NO marked roadways or telephone poles in Halleck Valley when Henry W. Halleck, the historical figure who gave the vale its name, was its owner as part of his sprawling 30,849 acres of Marin County holdings.

Henry Halleck's Valley — The Cabin Beside The Creek

For Pioneer, It Was His Place Where He Could Hunt And Relax

and coastal defense — Halleck was appointed Secretary of State for the Territory of California by the military governor, Colonel Mason. He became the bureaucratic and administrative head of the central government. He continued in this post, except for a diversion to Mazatlan and Baja California as lieutenant governor of the occupied territory, and Chief-of-Staff to the naval and military commander, during the administrations of Colonel Mason and Gen. Bennet Riley in both the military and civil governments.

BECAUSE OF his knowledge of law, and his study of the Mexican Archives (which were composed mainly of "expedientes" and title papers of land grants), he became an authority on the subject of land titles. His "Report on Laws and Regulations Relative to Grants and Sales of Public Lands," which the governor sent to Washington, became a text and authority for the commissioners and law agents of the U.S. Land Commission before whom all grantees and landowners were required to prove their titles.

Halleck's prestigious law firm of Halleck, Peachy and Billings was to handle over haif of all the landcases before that tribunal.

Halleck's research on the subject of grants and titles brought him in contact with many of the California landowners, and he enjoyed the confidence and friendship of the De La Guerra family in particular. Dona Teresa, Don Pablo's sister, was married to the government translator, ex-trader and California's favorite ex-patriot Englishman, William Hartnell, who was a good friend of Halleck's. Another sister and resident of Monterey, Dona Augustias, was the wife of ex-Secretary of State Jimeno.

IN 1849, AT the Constitutional Convention in Monterey, delegate Halleck, who was to be the substantial author of the State Constitution, renewed his acquaintance with Don Pablo, the delegate from Santa Barbara. The latter gentleman had some land to off-load and Henry Halleck was in the market.

By March, 1850, Halleck had started his law practice in San Francisco (although he was not to resign from the army until 1854), and in May the sale of the Nicasio acreage was consummated — $15,000 down and the balance later.

Don Pablo might well have wondered how Halleck could come up with the money — no private income, no extra income from moonlighting (Sherman and Ord had earned some substantial fees from surveying jobs in Benecia and the Pueblo de Los Angeles), and dependent fully upon his $400 a year army pay, and, if he pulled out all the stops, an allowance of $595. But Halleck slapped the money down in cash.

HIS HIDDEN resource was the "civil fund"; until the treaty of peace with Mexico, the fund was known as the "military contribution" raised by custom duties and used for the maintenance of the military government. In the period of limbo between the treaty and the request for admission of California into the Union (the U.S. government had never declared it to be a formal territory), the fund was growing and uncommitted. The delegates at the Constitutional Convention persuaded Governor Riley that it should be used for the maintenance of the new state government until taxes could be levied, and that in any event it was a tax imposed on Californians and so rightly belonged to them.

The delegates, without any real authority, voted the governor a salary of $10,000 and Secretary of State Halleck $6,000.

The fund was to be taken over by the U.S. government and California never saw it again, in spite of many spirited appeals. But Henry Halleck, as administrator of the fund, had paid himself retroactively to Aug. 13, 1847, when he became Secretary of State. The back pay amounted to $14,136.98 which he used as his down payment on the land. The amount was eventually disallowed, as he had expected, for according to army regulations an officer was not permitted to receive additional pay for public service. But the government never got around to asking for its return until 1855, and by that time Henry was a wealthy man so he sent a draft in payment by return steamer mail.

THE CONFUSING regulations, bad communications and a state of limbo had prompted other people to use government money for investment purposes. The famous "Croesus of San Francisco," Capt. Joseph L. Folsom, ex-army quartermaster and collector of customs, had the responsibility of two separate funds — money received from Washington for the purchase of quartermaster's stores and money received locally from custom duties. He borrowed $275,000 from his funds and purchased the vast Leidesdorff estate plus dozens of other San Francisco lots. He died before the government caught up with him.

Halleck was the executor of that estate which was anything but liquid. The government wanted their money quickly so Halleck was forced to sell off the city lots and the Folsom Rancho Americanos. Even at Halleck's death in 1872, the Folsom estate still had debts.

So Halleck was now a prominent lawyer and landowner — but this was not all. The famous quicksilver mine at New Almaden had been suffering from bad management, partnership jealousies, suits and countersuits, and its potential had never been tapped. Isodoro De La Torre of the Mexico-based banking house of Jecker, Torre (the famous partnership that loaned the Mexican government millions of French francs in returnfor Mexican bonds which were sold to the half-brother of Louis Napoleon, the Duc de Morney, and prompted Napoleon's adventure in Mexico that resulted in the death of Emperor Maximillian and the eventual downfall of the Second Empire) was one of the New Almaden partners, together with the British traders Alexander Forbes and Eustace Barron and the erstwhile British consul in California, J. A. Forbes.

DE LA TORRE looked for a superintendent and director-general of the mine, and he found such a man in Henry Halleck who agreed to serve the company at $500 a month when his other duties permitted.

At the same time — may, 1850 — his law firm was hired by the New Almaden Co. on a retainer of $30,000 for advice in the matter of title to the mine which was confused and suspect. This was to be the souce of endless litigation and confusion and represented the most complicated and lengthy land case ever to come before the U.S. District Court of Northern California and the U.S. Supreme Court.

With all these things going for him, Halleck found time to visit his Nicasio acres. He built a weekend cabin or "hunting lodge" on a tributary of Arroya Nicasio, now called Halleck creek, in the pleasant valley which leads north from the township of Nicasio. The cabin, which stood near the present day Irwin ranchhouse, was crudely made of redwood logs, and its roof was turf. He planted ivy against the rough hewn walls, and roses and some cactus.

The roses still bloom, and the other vegetation is still in evidence, but the cabin has long since disappeared, destroyed by the meanderings of Halleck Creek.

AFTER 1855 HE rarely visited the little hunting lodge. His elegant new bride, Elizabeth (she was the granddaughter of Alexander Hamilton), whom he married in New York in that year, preferred the splendor of their Rincon Hill mansion at Second and Folsom, and rarely ventured into the country.

The New Almaden management had built a large rambling house for the Hallecks — Casa Grande — in the area of the hacienda at the mine because Henry's visits were quite frequent in the mid-fifties, but Elizabeth never stayed there for she did not like the journey. In 1853 Halleck had designed, promoted and built San Francisco's famous Montgomery Block, which the law firm now owned. The firm occupied an elegant suite on the third floor.

All this eminence and prestige brought Halleck more clients, so the law prospered and his time was not his own. And by the mid-1850s he began to sell off his Nicasio lands. He disposed of 3,500 acres to James Black, his neighbor, for $5,000 in 1855. He sold the remainder during the Civil War when he was in Washington serving as General-in-Chief of the Union Armies, and later as chief-of-staff. The sales were made on his behalf by his friend, David Northrop, an associate in the now-defunct law firm, in small lots, at a considerable profit and for easy credit terms.

When Halleck returned to San Francisco in 1865 as commander of the Pacific Division, he would rusticate at San Rafael, and may well have ridden over the ridges and along theboundaries of his old estate.

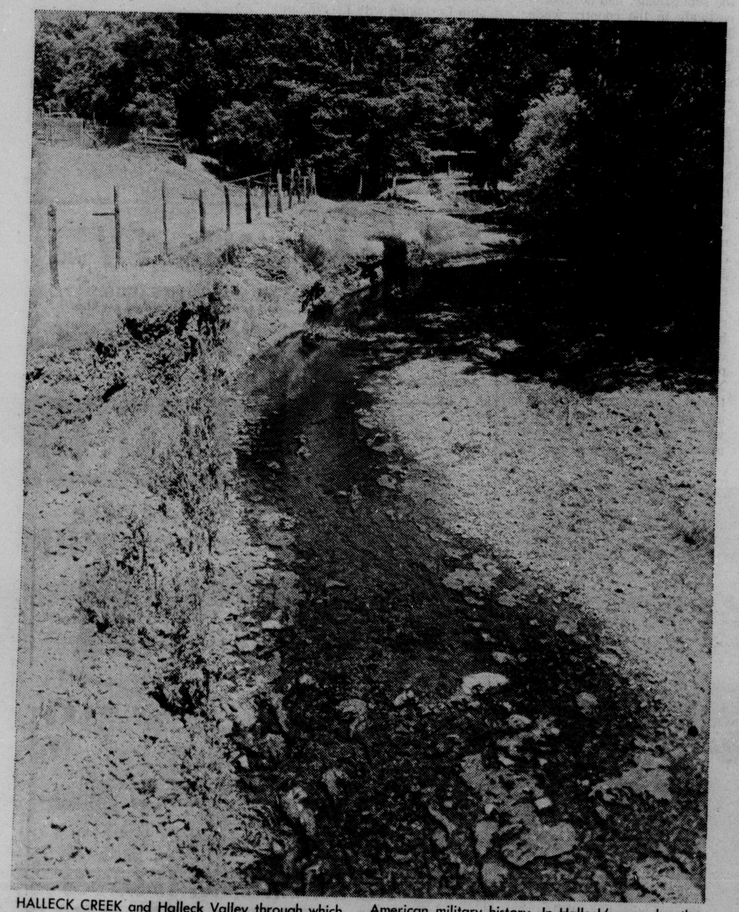
During his bachelor years he spent many a weekend on his rancho. His friends in the Quartermasters Department (for he was still in the army) allowed his free passage by the government scow or sidewheeler which would deposit him at Point San Quentin; then on to Don Timoteo's adobe, where he kept a horse, by creeking mudwagon.

IF IT WAS still daylight he would take the trail across Puerto Suello where the country abounded with game and the quail were "thick underfoot." This was the route favored by the Indians.

Sometimes he would take a commercial ferry to Ross Landing where the lumber scows loaded. Ross Valley was losing some of its elk, deer and bears which were moving north because of the increase of saw mills and related commerce, but it was still "dangerously full of game," sylvan and delightful. He wandered the rolling hills on his horse with a musket across his saddle bow and his two hounds sniffed out the prolific game. Here he escaped the pressures of his changing world.

For the sleepy days of early Monterey, the elaborate bailes and fiestas of the Californios, the expansive hospitality of the rancheros — all this life was disappearing before the surge of the puritanical Yankee, imbued with the work ethic and the double standard, the quantity became more important than quality.

AUTHOR'S NOTE: the definitive work, and incidentally the most readable, on the history of the local land grants and the grantees is the recently published book "Early Marin" by Jack Mason in cooperation with Marin County historian Helen Van Cleave Park. It is one of the best Bay Aea County histories to come out for a long time.



HALLECK CREEK and Halleck Valley through which the stream flows were named after Henry W. Halleck, owner and part-time resident of Rancho Nicasio who was later to play a leading role in American military history. In Halleck's own day the creek was simply one of the tributaries of the Arroya Nicasio, but its meandering waters gradually undermined the foundations of Halleck's cabin.

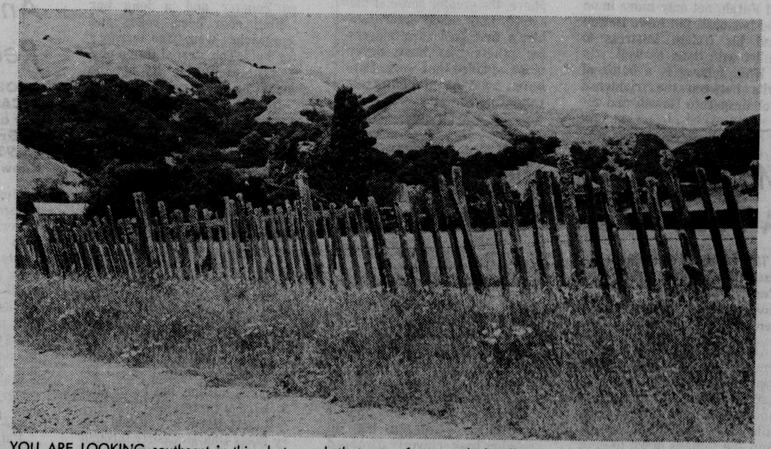
THIS PHOTOGRAPH captures the quiet and serenity of Halleck Valley today, with a view across a grassy meadow of tree-lined Halleck Creek and the site of Henry Halleck's cabin, and beyond it the redwood-covered hillsides.

FROM HICKS MOUNTAIN, on the northern boundary of Henry Halleck's land, one commands a sweeping view of what was once the vast Rancho Nicasio. And except for the telephone poles, the scene today is virtually unchanged from what pioneer surveyor Jasper O'Farrell gazed down upon 124 years ago.

HENRY HALLECK'S cabin or "hunting lodge" stood here in the days the future Union Army chief-of-staff owned his vast Nicasio Valley acreage. The cabin is long gone. But seen here is a confluence of two cultures that have left their imprint on the area in the cactus of Mexico and the rose bush of Anglo-Saxon tradition.



YOU ARE LOOKING southeast in this photograph that shows Halleck Valley as it appears today. The lichened fence undoubtedly is very old, but it is nevertheless probably of post-Henry Halleck vintage. But the general scene remains unchanged.

Eric Ambler's 'The Levanter' Is No Dimitrios

ERIC AMBLER
Full marks at 63

The mere name Eric Ambler is sufficient to bring to mind dangerous journeys on the Orient Express, mysterious assignations in small cafes in Balkan villages, nameless and faceless men lurking daggers in hand behind beaded curtains, movies with roles for Peter Lorre and Sidney Greenstreet.

For just that reason, Ambler's newest novel, "The Levanter," his 14th, is likely to disappoint some of his fans.

It is not that "The Levanter" isn't a good novel. It is. And it falls loosely into the spy thriller category in which Ambler won fame with his "Journey into Fear," "A Coffin for Dimitrios" and "Epitaph for a Spy" more than three decades ago.

What is missing from "The Levanter" is the special air of mystery and intrique, of atmosphere, with which Ambler invested those early novels and which were also to be found, although to a decreasing extent, in most of his more recent work.

Once one resigns himself to the fact that "The Levanter" is not to be another "Dimitrios" or "Journey into Fear," he can then sit back and enjoy this newest Ambler work for what it is —which is considerable.

Michael Howell, part Lebanese, part Greek Cypriot, part Syrian, only "fractionally British," has built up a prosperous family business in the Middle East, based in Damascus. His troubles begin when an Arab terrorist group, Palestinian Action Forbe, and its arrogant leader, Salah Ghaled, outlawed even by the El Fatah, not only move in on the business, but force Howell and his Italian mistress to enlist with them as well.

What follows is a battle of wits between the frightened yet desperate Howell and the fanatical Ghaled. The latter is determined to strike a blow against the Israelis that will restore him to good graces and prestige in the Arab world, and he plots to use Howell and the Agence Howell in so doing. Howell is equally determined to save the business and himself. But to do that, he must walk a thin line between Ghaled, Israeli agents and the Syrian authorities.

While Ghaled is the book's most memorable of several well drawn, international characters, one winds up with a respect for Howell that apparently his creator does not fully share. It is an admiration for those who survive despite forces aligned against them that are stronger or more ruthless than are they.

Give Eric Ambler, then, full marks for an entertaining tale. He still has the touch at 63. But yet, one cannot help but yearn for the sharper suspense, the duskier atmosphere, the greater sense of the exotic that made Eric Ambler's first books trailblazers for others who have never quite equalled that work. Perhaps even Ambler himself cannot do so.

A Primer On Cycling

BIKES by Stephen C. Henkel; Chatham Press, 96 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Gordon F. Parr.

With the tremendous renewed interest in bicycles the past few years on the part of young and old, it is not surprising to see also a flood of books about bicycling. This one purports to be an introduction to the basics of bicycling and will be of interest primarily to the younger cyclists — and possibly their dads.

Henkel, whose qualifications include a mechanical engineering degree and an interest in cycling, has put together a general book with a chapter on the history of the bicycle, another on the various parts of a bike, guidance on how to buy one — including choosing the right type and frame size — tools and maintenance and a few pages on very minor repairs.

The chapter on history is interesting though short — the advice on buying a bike sound. Starting with the intended use of the bike, whether to ride around the block, to use in delivering papers, or for eventual tours into the countryside of 50 or more miles, the new rider should make his selection carefully. Whether to choose a new or used bike, three-speed or 10-speed in heavy, medium or lightweight frame depends on expected use - and available money. With prices running from $40 or so up to nearly $500, Henkel brings up some of the questions you should ask yourself — or your child.

Maintenance and repair must be faced once the bicycle is bought as tires do go flat and chains will come off sprockets. The simple repairs are explained along with basic lubrication. Curiously, the common derailleur adjustments are left out. On most bikes, this is a simple screwdriver adjustment to either the top or bottom adjusting screw and solves most derailleur problems.

Oh well, for $4.95 I guess we can't expect perfection, can we?

Deighton Illuminates The Plight Of A Product Of Star System

THE CLOSE-UP by Len Deighton; Atheneum, 381 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Alice Dalbey.

"The reason so many people showed up at Louis B. Mayer's funderal," said Sam Goldwyn, "was because they wanted to be sure he was dead."

Exactly why people want movie folk — actors, directors, backers, writers, columnists — to end up dead is the theme of this new novel.

Central character is Marshall Stone, once plain Eddie Brummage, an expert and gifted actor, product of the star system. He's also a despicable little man, terrified of growing old, enraptured with his possessions and his carefully created image.

Circling him are the people who alternately pity him, support him, prey on him, and otherwise manipulate the prize property he has become. These include a sharp-witted ex-wife, a not-too-successful screen writer, a faithful agent, and a vicious backer-producer with Mafia connections.

Nevertheless this is a literate novel. Author Deighton, who also wrote the excellent "Ipcress File," produces fast dialogue, dotted with film-world cliches.

Each chapter — each scene — is prefaced with an illuminating quotation. Errol Flynn said: "I want to be taken seriously." Antonioni said: "Hollywood is like being nowhere and talking to nobody about nothing."

Marshall Stone also wants to be taken seriously, but he discovers that he's only a paper doll and that no one likes talking to him about anything — but his tragedy is that he doesn't care.

Growing Up In The Pool Halls

McGOORTY by Robert Byrne; Lyle Stuart, 223 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Harry Finch.

The old-fashioned pool hall of the 1920s and the early 1930s — what a fascinating world it was for big and small boys.

In front, the cigar and tobacco counter and a long bar selling near beer, cokes and sandwiches were free territory for kids. The eternal flame of a gas cigar-lighter lit up the gloom of the bar.

In the rear of this outer temple, a door with access denied to all under 21, lead to the holy of holies, the card and billiard room. In this dim hall, lit by green shaded hanging lamps, ivory balls clicked, counters on overhead wires were tallied, and players called for cards.

As a kid I could sneak in through the alley door in the back and stay until someone kicked me out.

In this world, now long gone, Dan McGoorty grew up and became a pool sharpie. In his own words, "I was a two-bit drunken hustler, but I was glad to have a profession."

Robert Byrne's well-told story takes Dan McGoorty through his youth in the pool halls and dance palaces in Chicago, on his travels riding the rods through the States, and his adventures as a pool hustler. He knew and recalls the great players of his time. After years of pool he converted to billiards, the "gentleman's game," became a champion, and finally broke his dependence on booze, to find that the popularity of billiards as a game and a spectator sport was over.

McGoorty was a proud, hard dandy. A contemporary said of him, "I never cared much for the guy, but I miss him."

Mountains And The People: A Book To Be Treasured

THE MIGHTY SIERRA by Paul Webster; American West, 280 pages, $13.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

American West has again combined beauty and scholarship in "The Mighty Sierra," a description of California's great mountain chain interspersed with history of its people — from the Indians down to date.

Essentially, "The Mighty Sierra" is a picture book, and pictorially it is a delight. But it is more than that, for Paul Webster's prose adds much to the understanding of the mountains that are illustrated in lavish color and black-and white photography. And maps and charts add still another dimension.

The Sierra Nevada's geology, plant and animal life, rivers and lakes, history and tourist attractions — all are here in one big book, cleverly arranged in sections that stand alone or can be read sequentially. This is a book to treasure.

An Era Of Hysteria Recalled In A Biography

JOE McCARTHY AND McCARTHYISM by Roberta Strauss Feuerlicht; McGraw-Hill, 160 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

"Joe McCarthy and McCarthyism" by Roberta Strauss Feuerlicht, a writer who has paid much attention to civil rights subjects, is the kind of book that could not have been published when it was most needed. Which is not to say that it is not needed now.

Certainly intolerance and demagogery are far from dead, and we are really only beginning to shake ourselves loose from the anti-communist hysteria generated by the senator from Wisconsin. Mrs. Feuerlicht does not treat McCarthy softly, although she strives for fairness in her biography toward a man she clearly loathes. And of the central question posed by McCarthy and his ilk, she writes: "Communists have committed enough sins in their own societies without being blamed for the flaws of non-Communist nations. If every Communist in the world were destroyed, America's fundamental problems . . . would remain, for they are self-inflicted."

One question is whether today's younger people are interested enough in this now shadowy figure from another generation to read about him. They should.

Liberace's Story

Putnam's has signed entertainer Lee Liberace for an autobiography to be published in the fall of 1973.

Book Pages

MAPLE-SUGARING: THE WAY WE DO IT by Myrtie and Floyd Fellows; Stephen Greene, 48 pages, $2.95.
THE ROSE GARDEN by Otto Friedrich; Lippincott, 78 pages, $3.95.
THE ORGANIC LIVING BOOK by Bernice Kohn; Viking, 91 pages, $4.50.

Three American Rituals, And The Pleasures They Provide

By DON KEOWN

There are certain chores that, while involving much labor and inconvenience, nevertheless provide in their accomplishment a sense of satisfaction that more than offsets the toil.

For the rural New Englander, maple-sugaring is such a job. For any rosarian his gardening qualifies. And for those caught up in the current yearning for a simpler, more natural life, or for those whose roots go back to pioneer stock, the baking of bread can be more privilege and pleasure than task.

"Maple-Sugaring: The Way We Do It" is a small booklet published by the imaginative Vermont house of Stephen Greene Press that had an unusual origin.

Myrtie Fellows, farm wife and grandmother, living outside Westminister West, Vt., began an album of pictures of the annual gathering and processing of the maple sugar from the trees on their place, intending it as a surprise gift for her husband. Friends saw the album, and the history-minded in particular urged her to have it published as a record of a facet of Americana that is fast vanishing. Stephen Greene is always receptive to such ideas, and thus emerged a charming book. The pictures are sometimes of ordinary snapshot quality, but the story of the tapping of the trees, the gathering of the sap and the boiling of it into the delectable syrup is there.

Husband Floyd Fellows, who seems the kind of man who might for his hobbies restore old carriages and sleighs and make ox yokes — and does — has added his brief comments beneath the pictures.

Says Floyd: "Sugaring is a lot like a poker game: You're in it before you know it."

Laments Myrtie: "Every year there are fewer farm families who carry out their own sugaring operations. I'm afraid that before too long the old maple trees festooned with buckets, the teams hauling the gathering tanks through the sugar bush, and steam billowing from the roof vents of sugar houses will be just country memories of Indian Spring."

And on Page 22 of his "The Rose Garden" Otto Friedrich notes that on the old family farm in Vermont where "we skied in the winters, down to the sugar house in the woods, where we brought the sled tank full of maple sap and poured into vats and boiled it into maple syrup," all is different now. "The barns burned to the ground in the mid-40s, and the maple trees have been cut down to make way for a new superhighway, and at the bottom of the valley, the Connecticut River is full of dead fish, floating white-bellied down to the sea." Thus confirming Myrtie Fellows' prediction before she made it.

But Friedrich is not concerned with maple sugaring, but rather with the special satisfactions of rose gardening. His small book is in part an account of his own experiences at growing roses, in part a passing on of rose lore and of the expertise of others, and in part Friedrich's personal philosophy of the kind inspired by contact with roses and the soil. His is an unpretentious little book, but one that rosarians will enjoy wholeheartedly. Admirers of Friedrich's other work will also enjoy this opportunity to meet him in gentle contemplation, marred only by the frustrations that occasionally confront all gardeners and make the whole thing challenging and worthwhile.

The instruction in bread baking you will find in "The Organic Living Book" by Bernice Kohn, better known for her children's books. It is another addition to the growing library of conservation-ecology-pollution control books, one of the smaller and no doubt lesser works, but nonetheless a refreshing and enjoyable experience for those who embrace the Mother Earth bit.

Along with breadmaking, you also receive instruction in the making of yogurt, in organic gardening, in composting, in sprout sprouting and in shopping the natural food way.

Mrs. Kohn is quite plainly convinced in the importance of her cause and her way of life and seeks converts. "Neither Americans, Europeans, nor Asians can go on as they are much longer," she warns. "We have littered our countryside with junk. We have poisoned our air and water, depleted our forests, killed our wildlife. We may well kill ourselves if we don't reverse the trend."

But whether Mrs. Kohn recruits you wholeheartedly into the ranks of those who practice organic living, or only whets your interest, the fact remains that the section of bread baking will suffice for many to cover the $1.50 cost of her book. One can almost smell the fragrance exuding from the oven at the height of what the writer insists is a ritual, not a chore. "If it is approached and carried out as such," she promises, "the baking will be not an ordinary act of cooking, but a deep, rich, satisfying, fulfilling experience."

Three small books, then, none a blockbuster, nor offering worldshaking substance. But all leaving a pleasant after-taste with the reader hungry for quieter, less inflammatory subjects.

"GHOST TOWN Bottle Price Guide" by Wes and Ruby Bressie has been published by Caxton Printers of Caldwell, Idaho, in an eighth edition with an expended section on Oriental relics.

It is still the basic material on western American bottles that will be of keenest interest to collectors, with drawings by Jeanne Bressie and photos by Terry Skibby adding to the book's value.

Covered is everything from Asparagus Gin to Gun Wa's Chinese Remedy bottles, from Brown's Iron Bitters to Dr. Henley's Celery, Beef and Iron Extract bottles.

In paperback it sells for $2.95. And it is a must for those caught up with a fascination for this particular aspect of Americana.

REIHARD GEHLEN, the espionage professional who served first Adolf Hitler and Nazi Germany, and then the United States and the West German republic, always working against the Soviet Union for his bosses, is a man commanding a great deal of literary attention these days.

Close on the heels of E. H. Cookridge's "Gehlen: Spy of the Century" has come "The General Was a Spy" by Heinz Hohne and Hermann Zolling. This $10 Coward, McCann and Geoghegan-published book, 347 pages thick, is, if anything, even more detailed and more strongly documented than the Cookridge work. It bears the endorsement of historian Hugh Trevor-Roper — "objectively written, with fairness and political understanding" — in its introduction. The co-author's understanding of German politics is particularly advantageous to them and used effectively.

Yet to come: Gehlen's own soon-to-be-published memoirs.

GHASTLY READING is "The Dellums Committee Hearings on War Crimes in Vietnam," a transcript of testimony heard in 1971 by an unofficial committee of leftist and liberal congressmen chaired by Rep. Ron Dellums of Berkeley. The testimony has been edited by the leadership of the Citizens Commission of Inquiry, an anti-war group. After listening to Elliott L. Meyrowitz, an infantryman in Vietnam, describe killings and burnings in which he participated or which he witnessed, Congressman Dellums is quoted: "My hope is no other young person will have to go through the same kind of evil, the same kind of insanity, the same kind of wanton death and destruction that you have been engaged in." The book is a $2.95 Vintage (Random House) paperback.

VINTAGE BOOKS (Random House) continues to cater to the cerebral with reprints of some of the deepest sociological, philosophical, political and economic tomes.

Some recent examples: "Bakunin on Anarchy," a collection of the works of Russia's Michael Bakunin as edited by Sam Dolgoff; "Steps to an Ecology of Mind," Gregory Bateson's thinking about thinking; Pierre Goubert's keenly analytical "Louise XIV and Twenty Million Frenchmen" with its strong social emphasis, and, for a change of pace, Willa Cather's 1923 novel, "A Lost Lady."

"BLACK SPIRITS" is an anthology of work by contemporary black poets, edited by Woodie King in consultation with Leroi Jones and published by Random House, that had its origins from a King-produced poetry festival held in New York City. Represented are the likes of Nikki Giovanni, Ed Bullins, Larry Neal, Welton Smith and Quincy Troupe — and Jones. There is variety in tone, style and intensity, but through the entire book runs the new black social, political and economic consciousness. And like any poetry collection, it tends to be uneven in its appeal and impact. The price — a stiff $8.95.

Sleuths & Suspense

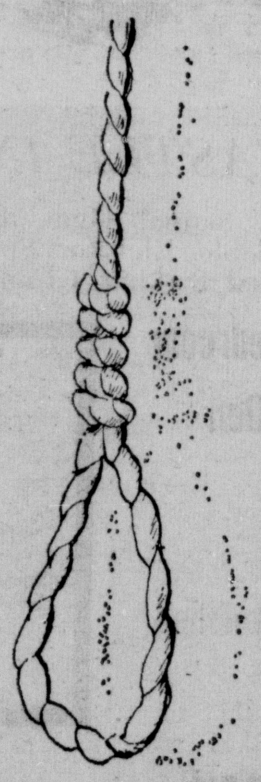
BONECRACK by Dick Francis; Harper and Row, 201 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Mary Leydecker.

Dick Francis, himself a former jockey, has put together another one of his good suspense tales, centering again upon the race track.

"Bonecrack" is not only a good mystery yarn, which should please Francis's old fans and make him some new ones, but it also provides a rather interesting insight into unusual relationships between two fathers and sons.

The main character, Neal Griffon, was harshly treated by his father when he was young and the younger Griffon, now a successful English businessman hasn't had much to do with the father in years.

The younger man, however, willingly takes over his father's race horse stables when the older Griffon is seriously injured in an accident. Although he's no professional horseman, Neal does very well until he becomes entangled with a rich, powerful and brutal European who has a fixation that his son is going to become a famous jockey.



The relationships between the European and his son and that of Neil and his father provides a contrast that is background for the intrigue-suspense of the story.

Even those who aren't horse buffs should enjoy this story set in Newmarket at a stables where England's finest race horses are trained.

A Guide To Good Eating In Europe

The Travel Pages

By R. H. GROWALD

BRUSSELS (UPI)—A great meal can cost more in Paris, London and Brussels than in New York. But UPI correspondents, Dr. Henry A. Kissinger, Zsa Zsa Gabor and other traveling diners know where to eat without pain to tummy and pocket book.

United Press International correspondents with decades of dining in the area produced last year a guide to good eating in Europe. Rising prices, falling quality and the shrinking dollar have wrought some changes.

This, for the benefit of fellow travelers, is the UPI correspondents' "1972 Guide to Good Eating in Europe," with added tips on Beirut, Jerusalem, Moscow end other oft-visited spots.

FIRST, A NOTE: In Brussels considered by some gastronomes the eating capital of the world, and in Paris and London, it is woefully easty to spend $100 on a gourmet meal for two. Thus, UPI Good Food Guide reporters have made an effort to share with the world their success in finding gourmet bargains in these cities.

White House aide Kissinger knows about the bargain spot ir London. Between missions tc various Shangri-Las, he has been dining in London at Odin's (27 Devonshire St., Telephone 935-7296). It may well be one of the best hideaway restaurants in the world.

Peter Langan, Odin's chef and co-owner, offers a meal for two for about $12, (5 pounds) including such as a mushroom pate baked in a French roll, pork loin stuffed with dates and walnuts, a cheese souffle (which, costing less than many a New York hamburger, could be the gourmet find of 1972), an under-titled dish named steak-gravy-and-onions, chicken in apple and apple brandy (Calvados), cream sauce, the beau ideal of the potato cake and such dessets as the finest trifle in Britain and Mrs. Langan's chocolate pudding, the diet destroyer.

The restaurant's decor (paintings and drawings by David Hockney, Patrick Proctor, Dame Laura Knight and other exceptions to the rule that Britons cannot paint) has caused the London Sunday Times to review Odin's both in its restaurant and in its art pages.

IF THE SETTING is elegant, Langan is something else. He is hurt if someone suggests he wears less than three days' beard growth. (Scene: Langan in sauce-sprinkled white chef's uniform seated at dining room table, drinking a second Lowenbrau beer and discussing his philosophy. "Yes, we redecorated. Playground Of The Danes

Tourists Can Join In Fun Awaiting All In Jutland

Danes don't need to "go away for the summer" because they have a perfect playground right at home. Jutland — Denmark's peninsula — is a vast storehouse of at-home fun for the Danes — and for millions of visitors.

For example, wouldn't you like to visit a small, beautiful town crammed with theaters, orchestras, museums and fashionable restaurants, without all the frenzy of big city life? Aarhus is the place.

Broad boulevards lined with gardens web this beautiful symbol of intelligent town planning. Wide beaches and forests stretch for miles along the curve of Aarhus Bay.

Early September is festival week in Aarhus and it offers an avalanche of cultural attractions, from ballet and puppet plays to jazz and concerts, many of them performed in an outdoor amphitheater.

HEAVY HELPINGS of culture can be offset with regular visits to Aarhus' amusement park — the Tivoli Friheden. Forty kinds of lighter entertainment are housed here, including Denmark's oldest merry-go-round.

History buffs have a special treat in Aarhus' Old Town, an open-air museum of reconstructed houses that vividly portray life in a Danish village hundreds of years ago. The homes were moved brick by brick from all over Denmark to be reassembled as a tribute to bygone days. A stroll down the cobbled lanes and through the quaint rooms of another era is a rewarding experience.

Aarhus is like wine — it should be sampled with friends — and Aarhus' "Meet the Danes" program is just the answer for making new friends.

GUILDERSTEIN may be dead, but Rosenkrantz isn't. Rosenholm, the ancestral mansion of the Rosenkrantz family of Hamlet fame, is near Aarhus and worth a day's outing if only to see its large park and fine art collection.

Rosenholm is not far from the Silkeborg lake country, where campers and canoeists abound. This is also the site of Denmark's only mountain, the "sky mountain," a beautiful 300-footer that could make everyone a climber.

Don't miss Ribe, Denmark's oldest town. A walk through the crooked streets past ancient monasteries and cathedrals of this 1,000-year-old hamlet is a must. Listen for the little school bell, ringing to remind all that Denmark's first school opened here 800 years ago.

THEN JUMP INTO your car and drive an hour to Legoland, home of Lego, the world's top educational toy. Lego is a miniature city where the houses are about two feet high. Children love the place. A miniature train tours visitors through the grounds.

Legoland also has a traffic school for children. Small cars are actually driven by the kids and a genuine cop directs traffic, issues tickets and awards junior driver licenses.

Would you believe — a lion park? Perhaps not, but it is a great success with the Danes, who enjoy motoring through the park while the big cats roam freely. Escort vehicles ensure safety. So far, no one has been hurt.

THERE IS SUCH a fairytale quality about Jutland that one might as well stay each night in a fairytale inn, Jutland's cure for "hotelitis." These quaint old hostelries, all conforming to modern standards of innkeeping, offer the lodger the glow of bygone days in the stone hearths, the copper pans that line the walls and the warm wooden dining booths.

For those weary of the youth cult, Aalborg in northern Jutland offers respite. Aalborg, home of fine aquavit, is for grown-ups. The aura of restrained cheer and good taste reflects in the cafes, ballrooms and museums.

One day each year, though, Aalborg cuts loose, and for one reason: the largest Fourth of July celebration of U.S. independence in the world. Yes, in the world.

Forty thousand Danes and Americans gather in Rebild Park to celebrate the friendship of the two nations. The American speaker this year will be Danny Kaye.

TV news commentator Walter Cronkite said after witnessing the 1967 celebration, "For me, it was the greatest July Fourth ever. Denmark is a land that commands the respect and wins the love of all who cherish freedom."

THE SMALLEST Town Hall in the world has stood in the picturesque town of Ebeltoft, with its cobbled streets so typical of Denmark's Jutland, since 1576, and still serves the villagers today.

Park Litter Costs Taxpayers Heavily

The high cost of litter continues to rise in the nation's 752.2 million acres of federal parks, forests and lands, with the price tag for fiscal 1971 estimated at about $21,623,000.

That marks a hike of more than 12 per cent over the $19,257,000 spent for cleanup in fiscal 1970.

JUTLAND'S OLDEST town is Ribe, a hamlet that can trace its history back 1,000 years. Peaceful and quaint houses, ancient monasteries and cathedrals, and the site of the first school in all of Denmark are among Ribe's attractions.

Eating Your Way Through Europe

original. I'm not. All the dishes are derivative."

In Paris, UPI correspondent Alex Frere points to a bargain in a city where even a decade ago a hamburger in a drug store cost $3. Says Frere:

Chez Pierre (60 Rue St. Lazare. Phone 874-5876). Cost is $14.50 (80 francs) for a dinner for two. Bottle of the house wine—red Chentefleur, excellent—is $2 (9.50 francs) and white Gaillac $1.35 (6.50 francs). Personally recommended dishes are filets de sole Pierre—poached fillets of sole in pastry boats full of duxelles (a mushroom sauce)—and paupiettes de veau (rolled, stuffed veal). The Restaurant is very good and very simple and in central Paris it gives best possible value for money.

In Brussels, Vincent's (8-10 Rue Dominicains. Phone 11-2303) possibly offers the set-meal bargain of the year. For $3 (115 Belgian francs) the diner gets one of the best green vegetable soups native to northern Europe, a choice of such starters as a fondue fromage (deep-fried cheese and tomato-sauce) chicken croquettes combination, a main course such as an entrecote steak, dessert such as praline aux amandes (nuts, ice cream, whipped cream, calories). Moules (mussels) are a seasonal Belgian specialty of special value. The restaurant is so crowded it refuses to take reservations, reluctantly holding a table once only for America's astronauts.

OTHER 1972 suggestions, city by city:

Amsterdam — UPI's Willem Vuur says his favorite is the Dikker en Thijs (Prinsengracht 444, Phone 020-67721) which runs about $25 for dinner and wine for two. The food would be, for example, grapefruit cocktail with sherry, veal cutlet cordon bleu (layered with ham and cheese), hazelnut parfait with the excellent house wine about $7 a bottle. Diners favoring it include Zsa Zsa, Leonard Bernstein, James Mason.

Beirut—Myrtom House (Rue Mexique. Phone 349-235) is the favorite of UPI's resident correspondent Gerard Loughran. He reports, "It's an Austrian pension run by Hans Maschek, an old hand in the Arab world. An average meal for two rarely will cost more than $8 (24 Lebanese pounds). Specialities include fresh or smoked trout from the mountain village of Anjar, roast suckling pig with sauerkraut and often such items as roast boar from Czechoslovakia. The atmosphere is Austrian, intimate.

West Berlin—At the end of World War II Russian troops stabled officer's horses in the baroque room of Mampe's Gute Stube (Kurfuerstendamm 14, Phone: 881-7101), but the old restaurant, once the favorite of Prussia's officer corps, is back offering dinner for two from $8.50 to $12.50 (27 to 40 marks). UPI's Joseph B. Fleming gives his nod to Mampe's regragout in sahne mit chempignon (vension stew in cream sauce with mushrooms). The sidewalk terrace offers one of the better views of West Berlin's main street. A politician's and writer's favorite, Mampe's is famed for its pre-meal champagne cocktails.

Bonn—UPI's Charles W. Ridley, stationed here, says his favorite is the Weinkrueger (610 Mauspfad, Phone: 635-403), cool, wood-paneled, 200 years old and situated in a tiny street off the main square. Something of a classic Rhine wine establishment. Meal for two costs about $8 (25 marks), with wine about $3 (10 marks) a bottle. Rhineland sauerbraten (marinated beef in thick fruity sauce) with potato dumplings, a specialty.

COPENHAGEN—Fish eaters are pointed by UPI's James Ward to Krog's Fiskerestaurant (Strand 38, Phone 158-915). Jim would suggest a main dish of tout de Paris—boiled and fried plaice with hollandaise and lobster sauce plus shrimp, lobster, rice and vegetables. All for $5 (36 kroner). Fish is fresh from the sea. Closed Sundays. All prices include tips.

Dublin—UPI's Donal O'Higgins says all eyes will smile in the Olde Hob (68 Lower Leeson St., Phone 64-745) where about $12 should cover food, house wine and tip. Donal suggests the fried Dublin Bay scampi and possibly the best applie pie a la mode in Europe.

Geneva—The late Winston Churchill's chef, Henri Piquet, is at 72 holding forth in the Cafe du Grand Casino (Rue Plantation 19, Phone 322-815) with what UPI's John A. Callcott calls one of the finest— and most inexpensive—restaurants in a city regarded as a gourmet capital. Meal for two is about $6, plus $3 for a liter of house-wine. The Ostend sole arrives fresh Tuesday and Friday and makes this one of the few landlocked restaurants of Europe to serve absolutely fresh sole. Also excellent is the chef's filet mignon of pork in a cream-based sauce with mushrooms and cognac.

HAMBURG—UPI's Wellington Long selects the Austern-Keller (Jungfernstieg 34, Phone 346-265). Price for two about $12 (40 marks), plus $6 for a bottle of Mosel wine. Menu specialties include forelle Florentine (trout in cheese sauce) and lobster.

Helsinki—Finland's President Urho K. Kekkonen is among the frequent diners at Motti (Toeoeloenkatu 2, Phone 494-418). Meal for two costs about $10. The Finnish palate is a bit more adventuresome than some. But, go on, try the kidney flambue with buttered toast. And no visit could be complete without pate of reindeer tongue in aspic, says UPI's Bjoern Hoeijer.

Jerusalem—The Sea Dolphin Restaurant (corner of El-Rashid and Azzarha Streets, phone: 82-788) was the first joint Jewish-Arab venture in East Jerusalem after the 1967 Middle East War. A Jewish fish dealer and an Arab with an empty store produced the restaurant, catching, cooking and serving their fish. A favorite of both Arabs and Jews, including members of Premier Golda Meir's cabinet, the Sea Dolphin offers a meal for two for about $9.50 (40 Israeli pounds). UPI's Kenneth Lucoff recommends the shrimp baked in cheese and wine sauce for a starter, followed perhaps by the sole with almonds, dates and orange juice laced with Arak, a Pernodlike liquor. Ken suggests for dessert the creme Bavaria.

Lisbon—The Avis Restaurant (1 Rua Serpa Pinto, Phone 328-391) belongs in style to the 19th Century but, says UPI's Laurence Meredith, should be treasured by 20th Century stomachs. Meal for two averages about $22 (600 escudos) but watch it—some of the ala carte items can skyrocket the bill. For value, Meredith suggests stick to Protuguese wine, a first grade bottle should cost no more than $2.20 (70 escudos). Specialties include the pork cubes sauteed with baby clams (carne de porco Cateplana). The clams come in their shells and the pork in a sauce that is the Avis' secret.

LONDON — (besides Odin's) shows further evidence of its emergence from the culinary dark ages into kitchen leadership. The White Tower (1 Percy Street, Phone 636-8141) is a Greek-Cypriot restaurant listed by many gourmets as perhaps one of the world's finest restaurants. The pates are Middle Eastern and Mediterranean and magnificent. Owner John Stace presides over a restaurant featuring better Greek dishes than are available in Greece and perhaps the finest roast duck (served only just after 8 P.M.) in the world. Book far in advance and figure $12 (five pounds) a person. Royalty dines here.

Luxembourg City—Where the French cuisine meets the German appetite. The choice of UPI's Richard C. Longworth is the Restaurant du Commerce (13 Place Darmes, beside the bandstand in the cobbled heart of the city. Phone 26-930). In plain but cheeful surroundings, visitors dine well on such as Alsatian snails ($4.40 a dozen) or fresh asparagus wrapped in paper-thin Alsatian ham ($270). Usually crowded, so phone for reservations.

Madrid—UPI's Peter Uebersax plumps for Casa Paco (Calle Puerta Cerrada 11, in the old city. Phone 266-3166). Seats 70, so reserve. A meal for two will cost about $11 (700 pesetas) plus very inexpensive house wine. If you do not like steak, do not go. Paco's is the champion in a steak-eating city.

Moscow—UPI's David Nagy advises, "the best Moscow restaurant can seem like the worst on any given day." That said, the following two choices:

(1) The Berlin (Ulitsa Zhdanova 3, in central Moscow's Hotel Berlin. Phone 221-0477). A specialty is the filet Berlin, for $1.98 (rubles 1.64) steak fried and placed on fried bread and smeared with chicken liver pate and bathed in madeira sauce. The restaurant is Moscow's most baroque, red plush, mirrored ceilings, gilded cupids and all. (2) The National Hotel's restaurant (Ulitsa Gorkovo), Phone Phone 203-6539) is across the street from the Kremlin (good window seat view), and the food remains above Moscow standard. Suggested is the schnitzel po Moskovsky (schnitzel a la Moscow) chicken filet rolled in bread crumbs, dipped in egg yolk and pan fried, then served with apples baked in thick pancake batter. Price $2.02 (rubles 1.67).

Munich—UPI's Stanley Parker suggests Humplmayr (Maximiliansplatz 16, Phone: 220-447), one of the German world's boasts. Meal minus wine about $14 (45 marks). Try the lobster cooked in champagne, or the roast duck.

Stockholm — The Cattelin (Storkyrkobrinken 9, in the old town. Phone: 201-818), is the choice of UPI's Ian Westergren, and a favorite also of Sweden's Premier, Olof Palme. Meals run from $6 (30 kronor) up. Fish is the thing and the sole-cooked a dozen ways — is it. Adventurers might try the pickled raw Baltic herring in mustard sauce.

VIENNA—Sacher's Hotel Restaurant (4 Philharmonikerstrasse, Phone: 525-575) of course, says UPI's John Lawton. Meal for two will cost about $18 plus about $4 for house wine. The boiled beef, the half-boned baked chicken, the Sacher Torte, (chocolate cake) have made it as much a Vienna institution as Strauss music. John also suggests the Goesser Bier Klinik (Steindlgasse 4, Phone 633-336) where a meal for two minus wine costs around $9. Venison steak with sliced dumpling and cranberry sauce (hirschbraten mit serviettenknoedel) is for the gourmet.

Rome—According to UPI's Charles W. Bell, when in Rome head for (1) Gigetto Er Pescatore (Via Sant'Elia 13, Phone 879311 or 879929. Closed Mondays. For about $10 (6,000 lire) for two minus wine, owner Luigi Lazzaretti offers orate (like red snapper) and spigola (sea bass), both grilled, for openers, then try spaghetti alle vongole (with clam sauce). (2) La Soffita (Via dei Villini 1, phone 844-41-86, closed Mondays) boasts the alternative to spaghetti—scamorza allo spiedo, a kind of stringy mozzarella cheese cooked on a spit and usually eaten with sausages and salami and toasted bread dosed with salt, pepper and oil. For a main course, try vitello. About $10 (6,000 lire) for two.

FINLAND ISN'T exactly the country that comes first to mind when you think about good eating. But Helsinki does offer some excellent fare — not only the native dishes (anyone for reindeer steak?), but also international cuisine. For example: this new gourmet Japanese restaurant, where the waitresses are Japanese girls, attired in Komono and obi, who are working to help pay their way through Helsinki University. Decor is strictly Oriental, with bamboo curtains, teakwood tables and paper lanterns, and patrons dine, Japanese style, while sitting on the floor.

Yes, Even On A Step Hillside, You Can Still Drown That Tree

Garden Page

By FRANK TAYLOR

When it's bareroot tree and shrub planting time, the garden shops don't like to see me coming. That's because I buy roots rather than trees.

They often have to pull half a dozen trees out of the damp sawdust before a stout clump of roots satisfies me. I'm not too finicky about trunks and branches. With a vigorous root system and some careful pruning, I can shape up the kind of a tree I want in a season or two.

Trees with roots hidden in cans are something else again. I have to buy roots sight unseen, until I slice the cans open. Then I usually find the roots going 'round and 'round.

With a big knife blade I cut roots mercilessly before planting to induce the new root shoots to go out in all directions.

THEN BEGINS the guessing game. What's going on down below the mulch and topsoil so friable and loose that I can dig into it with my fingers?

A couple of years back our favorite dwarf peach tree just quit growing. The peaches, which had been large and juicy the season before, matured as small as golf balls. The leaves were curled up and yellowish. Extra feeding and watering failed to perk up the tree. A friend who was a big peach grower looked at the sick tree.

"Looks to me as though you're drowning it," he said.

"How could it drown on a steep hillside like this?" I said.

"Dig down and see," he advised. "Maybe you have gumbo under your topsoil."

SO I DUG. He was right. Down about two feet the soil was like muck. No air could penetrate it. The peach tree roots were suffocating.

A careful look at other trees on the contoured slope — apricots, apples, citrus — turned up a warning that they, too, were struggling to survive.

Luckily, I found a treatment for the gummy sub-soil, namely, frequent application of a soil conditioner. It gradually broke down the sticky clay into friable soil that roots and air could penetrate. When the rainy season came on, the surplus water drained off.

To get the roots off to a new start, I gave them several shots of root stimulator. The trees took on new life. The following season they bore big peaches again.

DWARF FRUIT trees seem to require special attention to their root systems, probably because the dwarf rootstock is overworked to produce full-size fruits. Several times I've lost dwarfs before I could treat the sticky sub-soil adequately. When I dug them up to replace them, I found much of the root bark rotted.

That made a believer of me; I've seen with my own eyes how trees can drown on a steep slope.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

- If your lawn is browning and drying out, the soil may be compacted. Use a coring tool or aerator to spike the impervious ground. If the area is large, use a power spiker.
- As your vacation draws near, draw up specific and detailed written instructions on the care of your garden for the person who will be left in charge. It may prove the saving of valued shrubs and plants.
- Stake and tie tomato plants to keep them from sprawling on the ground.
- Bloomed-out delphiniums should be cut back to within a few inches of the ground, so that they will grow new tops and bloom again later in the summer.
- Brighten your garden with a few pots of blooming geraniums, pelargoniums, marguerites and Transvaal daisies from the nursery.
- Be on the alert for spider mites in your evergreens, and take appropriate defensive action if they show up. Your nurseryman can recommend the proper treatment.

In Summer, Water Feed And Weed

Pinpointing the most important aspect of gardening is not easy, but in California, where our summer is a long, dry season, watering has to be of prime importance.

With too little water, plants sulk and may survive, but their performance is sub-par. There's no need to discuss the future of plants which receive no water.

When you consider most living things — including humans — are mostly water, the importance of adequate moisture becomes more evident. In plants, it keeps the growth succulent and vigorous; enables roots to take up minerals and food from the soil.

It's possible to overwater, too, but this problem occurs, generally, in poorly-drained soils which become soggy.

UNDERWATERING is most common among newcomers to Marin. Simply running the sprinkler a few minutes every day does not insure the plants have ample water available to them. Hand watering with a hose is even more futile. Frequent, light waterings may not penetrate and encourage the desired deep root systems.

With plans such as azaleas, camellias and fuchsias, which are naturally shallow-rooted, this is not a problem. But most shrubs and trees are heathier with their roots down deep — where they can drink and stay healthy even during brief periods of neglect.

Test your own watering effectiveness: dig down a foot, or two, in a shrub border, or take a core from your lawn. If the moisture is deep you can congratulate yourself.

FEEDING IS also important, and will help insure that your soil is a favorable growing medium for plants. Feed to encourage growth or to insure more bloom. A few plants may have brighter flowers if food is withheld, but most will benefit and respond, accordingly, by regular feeding.

THE AABACHEE

AN UNUSUAL Day Lily called the Aabachee is included among the many photographs of plants in the new Time-Life Encyclopedia of Gardening series volume, "Perennials." The Aabachee represents 20 years of hybridizing effort by Raymond Cheetham of Kent, Ohio. He crossed and recrossed seven different flowers and scores of their offspring to achieve an unusual purple spider type. "Perennials" is authored by James Underwood Crockett, well-known horticulturist and landscaper, and is the eighth book in the series. Crockett focusses upon perennial culture, and upon the most effective use of these versatile plants.

A Lily Pond Lifts Your Morale

By MILLICENT TAYLOR

For different gardening experience, why not a pond?

It does not have to be big. There are containers of all sizes, from a tub or cloverleaf of three tubs to fiber glass and plastic pools six feet by four feet in various shapes.

Or if you are a do-it-yourselfer you can construct your own. The water-garden nurseries will give you complete directions.

The thing is that water lilies are so beautiful, and all the aquatic plants are interesting and unusual. A lily pool even as small as a tub does something special for a garden. Somehow alive, it becomes a focal attraction that adds a new dimension.

WHY NOT WALK about to see where one might be located? It should have at least five hours of sunlight and should seem to "belong".

A small tub pool can occupy a corner. A sunken reflecting pool not much larger than a scatter rug can make the patio more refreshing. A larger pool can accent the beauty of the whole landscape design.

You can make any of these look natural by planting moisture-loving plants around it. These include Japanese iris, cardinal lobelia, forget-me-not fern. You might back it up, too, with a rock garden.

THE POOL ITSELF can be planted with hardy or tropical lilies, day or night bloomers, that are available in pastel and deeper colors. Then you will want floating plants which fish like, and oxygenating plants, also aquatics whose roots are beneath the surface but which send up decorative leaves above water. Some of these bloom.

Jars and pots set at various levels underwater, the soil covered with an inch layer of sand, do for most of the plants. There are special containers for water lilies that are made of cedar, or cypress, or of plastic.

In a small pool or tub a pygmy water lily can be planted directly in soil in the bottom, but in a larger fiber glass or plastic pool it is better to have all the plants except the floating ones in containers at various levels.

IF YOU ARE new at all this, why not start with a simple tub garden? The water-garden nurseries will sell you a cedar or galvanized tub, or you can use an old bath tub or what you will.

The nurseries also have plant collections that include a pygmy lily or two, such items as primrose creepers, water poppies, arrowhead, saggitaria, and snails. They also have fish — common and fancy goldfish or tropicals. Or you can patronize your local pet or variety stores.

The colors of water lilies are ravishing. Besides the whites with yellow centers, most of them fragrant, there are several shades of pink, red, purple, lavender, yellow, mauve, blue, even bi-colors, and ones that change tones. Flower shapes are varied, and there are both day and night bloomers.

Since the plant names are likely to be unfamiliar, it is a good idea to take advantage of collections — either complete for a certain size pool or of various kinds like oxygenating and bog and shallow-water plants.

The Fence Completes Your Yard Plan

Privacy And Protection, Plus Air Of Hospitality

Erecting a boundary fence may be the final step in a yard plan, but a wise home owner doesn't call the job done until the fence is in.

The fence is the frame around the picture created by the house and its surrounding landscaping. It not only guards privacy and property, but makes the first impression on a guest as well.

Like a piece of original art, every man's home has special qualities and a good fence is a combination of proper style, height and durability to best complement its gwner's needs and taste.

HEIGHT WILL be subject to local building codes, specified by permit, but a degree of agreeable isolation is almost always possible.

Wood fencing in a board pattern is a popular choice, easily built and individualized by width, spacing, and horizontal, vertical or diagonal placement of boards.

For contemporary homes and enthusiasts of the "natural" look, wood can be left to weather to a soft silver grey without finish, or brushed with semi-transparent stain to add color impact to rich grain and texture.

THE WIDE range of opaque stains now available is good news for owners of homes with painted siding. It is relatively easy to stain new fencing to harmonize with house or trim color, providing continuity in appearance with stain's easier upkeep.

Stepped sections of one-by-four inch resawn western cedar board fencing edge a sloping yard effectively, providing seclusion (especially near the house, where panels should be highest), yet welcoming and directing a visitor from the street side.

Basic framing is four-by-four inch posts and two-by-four inch stringers, but for added accent expose posts and two-by-six inch cap above the board panels. Open space above and below lightens the effect of a tall fence without sacrificing its screening quality.

Customizing a fence is easier than it sounds, as easy as nailing decorative two-by-two inch strips to the top of a panel (or bottom, or both), to produce a striking pattern.

Design can carry over to individual sections placed for special duties such as screening a side entry, creating a service court, or replacing a too-public view at any window with a wood-walled privacy garden.

THIS HANDSOME board fence of resawn western cedar directs welcome visitors from the road to the hillside while screening the yard from the view of passers-by. Boards are one-by-four-inch, on four-by-four-inch posts, with two-by-four-inch stringers. Decorative two-by-twos enclose area under the rail. The back door screen matches the fence.

About CARPETS

By Doug Emerson

COLOR COMBINATIONS are one of the freshest trends in carpets, and the idea is not new at all, like so many trends in fashions, from clothes to furnishings.

Early American woven rugs used different colors as a matter of course, and the blending of carpet fibers of varying hues has long been a popular practice. What is different about color combinations today is not the notion but the way it's done.

One reason is the development of new dyes and new carpet fibers that take readily to almost any shade of coloring. So you'll find reds, for instance, that are made up of red, cerise and magenta. Or rich new gold combinations achieved with varying shades of yellow, from daffodil to deep amber.

Like the new solid color carpets, the combinations tend to be lighter and brighter, with white yarns often woven into the blend. Two, three or four-color mixes are common.

We have the right carpet combination to fit your needs, your taste and your budget. Come on and look over the varied displays . . . or give us a call for convenient shop-at-home service, with samples brought to your door.

A PLACE FOR PLAY AND DREAMS THE CHILDREN CAN CALL THEIR OWN

A PLAYHOUSE of their very own can, for children, turn a backyard from a prison into a place of fun and adventure. It's a boon for mother, too, keeping the youngsters occupied and out from underfoot. When properly planned, with storage for playthings, it can also alleviate the chronic problem of backyard clutter. With this in mind, Steve Ellingson has designed a playhouse ideal for little girls' tea parties and little boys' secret club meetings. It's Plan No. 224 and it costs you one dollar, sent to Steve Ellingson, San Rafael Independent-Journal Pattern Department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., 91409. With the help of the pattern, it becomes a simple project. The principal material is inexpensive exterior plywood. And the finished product boasts Dutch doors, windows and overhanging roof. Furthermore, its usefulness doesn't end when the children grow up. Just convert it into a potting shed or tool storehouse, and it will give you years more service. An occasional coat of paint will keep it looking nice for years.

Summer Is Season To Side House

Summer is the season for siding a house, and nothing adds a more pleasant personality than rough-sawn western red cedar boards or traditional bevel siding of western wood.

A good time to re-side a house is when remodeling or adding a room, but it can be done at any time. There is a wood siding style and pattern to complement any architecture.

Some prefer a metal siding such as aluminum for its low maintenance and durability. And there are composition sidings on the market, too.

Board siding has many variations, plain tongue-and-groove, board-and-batten or board-on-board, and clapboard. These are further varied by using rough or surfaced boards and by leaving them to weather naturally, staining or painting.

Another popular style, channel rustic, may be applied vertically or horizontally. For a different accent wall, tongue-and-groove or shiplap drop siding can be applied diagonally.

For an eight-page booklet colorfully illustrating wood siding styles and applications, send 15 cents in coin to Western Wood Products Assn., Department 522-P, Yeon Building, Portland, Ore., 97204.

INSIDE YOUR HOME

For A New Window Treatment Replace Drapery With A Grill

By CAROLYN S. MURRAY

Think free. Forget the draperies and curtains for at least one room in your house.

Pick the one that needs the most light, where privacy is the least urgent. Then create a whole new window and wall treatment by adding perforated grills at windows and against windowless walls.

The grilled window comes to us from Morocco and Spain, New Orleans and India — places where gentle division seemed essential, but air movement and light were also desired.

A grilled window screen can nicely obscure the view from the outside yet allow a resident to see what's going on outdoors.

The dining room pictured on this page is an example. On the fifth floor of a city apartment, this was just the corner of a living room. It had no architectural detailing and just the one large window. Heavy draperies and curtains diminished what daylight there was, so the owner decided to start anew.

WOOD PANELING was applied to the wall area in this L-shaped corner. Then small vertical posts were attached at matched intervals.

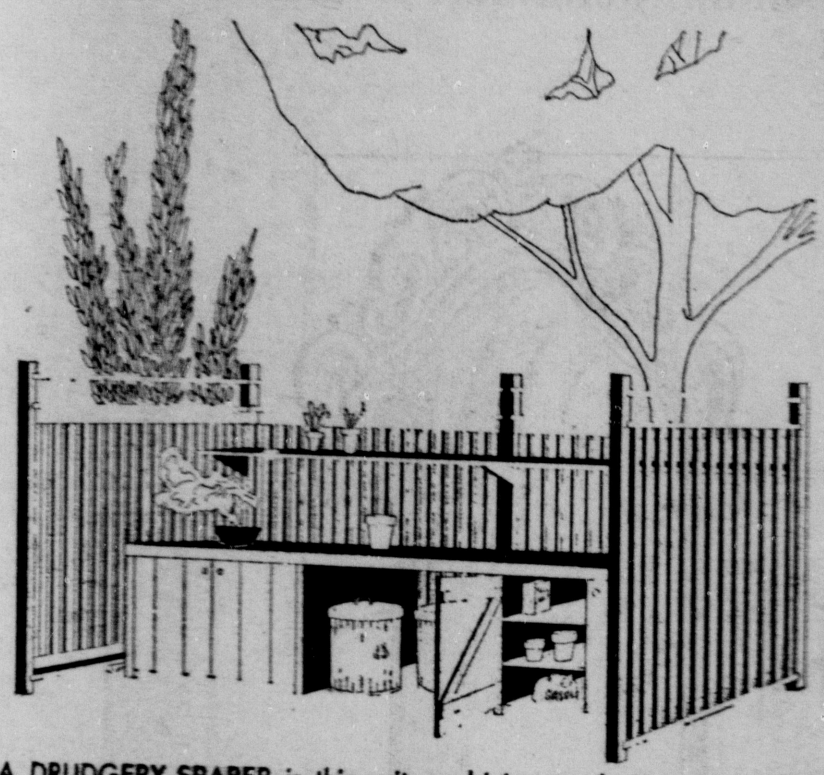
The filigree hardboard screens were framed in bead moldings and attached to the space between the posts and over the window. The result was so delightful and latticelike that the owners decided to use a dining group in cast aluminum and glass and add a new white lighting fixture. Now there's the look of a miniconservatory in this interior.

A short time later they installed new flooring in a mock-tile pattern to complete the cool, casual look.

GRILLES CAN be used in many ways.

They can screen the front door so that guests sitting in the living room are not exposed every time someone comes in or rings the doorbell. A grille panel makes a nice divider between twin beds in a room where two children of different ages share the space. And ordinary open bookcases can move away from a wall when backed with this kind of screening panel. It creates just the right amount of separation without blocking out light and air.

THIS APARTMENT didn't have a terrace or balcony. So its occupants created a miniconservatory. Windows, without drapery, are screened instead with grilles. Wood paneling and vertical posts provide the look of architecture.



A DRUDGERY-SPARER is this unit combining gardening storage with work counter, saving you steps in search for scattered tools. Posts are four-by-four-inch western red cedar, stringers are two-by-fours, vertical screening two-by-twos and counter two-by-12 planks. A sun screen or roof could be added. The structure also serves to separate leisure activities from the work area.

Storage Unit Cuts Steps, Screens Area

An organized outdoor storage area means less drudgery and more time to spend on the enjoyable aspects of gardening.

Just think how many unnecessary steps are saved by not having to trek to garage or basement and back, when tools, sprays and other supplies are kept in one place in the garden.

Advance planning will place the unit in a central location or closest to the main work areas. A garden storage structure may be freestanding, or attached to a fence, garage or house wall.

One handsome, efficient work-storage unit can be constructed to serve as a yard divider as well, screening off work areas from the leisure living portion of the yard.

FOR THE AVID gardener, this unit includes a working space about the size of a kitchen counter, with room below for barrels or bins of potting soil, peat moss and other mixtures.

Lock-up cabinets keep tools, fertilizers and lawn mower fuel safe. Conduit can be laid from the house to provide outlets for electric edgers or mowers.

The basic structure of the three-sided unit is four-by-four-inch posts, two-by-four-inch stringers, two-by-two-inch vertical screening and two-by-12-inch planks for the counter. For the posts, western red cedar is a good choice and even though cedar is naturally decay-resistant, it's a good idea to treat with preservative that part of the posts to be underground.

THE STRINGERS and screening can be cedar or other western woods such as Douglas fir, pine or spruce. A shelf or two above the work surface holds newly potted plants or keeps smaller tools and supplies handy while working.

The screening blocks the work counter from view and also can be used to hide a composting area or other unsightly part of the yard. The unit is designed without a roof, but could have a slatted sunshade or cedar-shingled roof if desired.

For ease of maintenance through the years, the wood can be left to weather naturally, or be stained lightly.

A TV Giant Looks At Networks Today

By ALAN BUNCE
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

Fred W. Friendly is a celebrated and much-quoted television newsman currently filling three impressive posts, who insists that "I am a has-been."

From other men of his stature, such an admission might sound ironic or even sad. From Friendly, it means only that he recalls with obvious relish his laurel-studded career as a producer at CBS News, and later president. The statement is typical of the passionate honesty he brings to every issue at hand, especially himself.

He resigned from CBS during a highly publicized dispute in 1966, when the network decided to air situation-comedy reruns instead of hearings then being held on the Vietnam War by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee

I FOUND HIM on the 10th floor of the Ford Foundation, where he now serves as adviser on television. It's an awe-inspiring place: hushed, sleek, and fairly glittering with polished brass and buffed wooden floors. A giant well rises the entire height of the building, so that on three sides the halls look down on glassed-in trees and grass, as if you were in a 10-story greenhouse.

"I was shavingthis morning," Friendly says, "which is about the only time I get for contemplation these days, and I was thinking about this conversation. And it's true, I am a has-been, just the way the others in this series are.

"The work I did at CBS is certainly the high-water mark in my career, when I was a productive, creative programmer. It's what I always wanted to be. It's what I was.

"BUT I GO to bed tired at night, which is about all you could ask for in life. I think I'm fulfilled I get to see a little more of my family."

He finds time to see them despite being a professor of journalism at Columbia University and running a summer program there that prepares minority students for careers in journalism. "I spend 80 per cent of my time at Columbia," he explains "and 80 per cent of my time at the Ford Foundation and as Dr. Frank Stanton (CBS vice-chairman) would say, I'm still lousy at mathematics."

The failure to carry live coverage of the hearings that precipitated Friendly's 1966 departure starkly parallels network performance earlier this month, when similar hearings were being held. Have the six intervening years shown no change for the better?

"I DON'T THINK it's improved much," Friendly comments. "They try. The ability to do the job is probably better. CBS News is probably better organized. But it seemed to me ABC had (the recent hearings) on it by coincidence. CBS had on, if not 'I Love Lucy,' something just like it. Public television did two or three hours that night. But it's not the same thing as having it on live."

ABC ran an unscheduled hour and a half of live coverage when Secretary of State William Rogers was testifying. But neither CBS nor NBC carried any live coverage, although NBC did offer taped highlights along with Vietnam background on two different days.

"I think the problem is air time, not guts," Friendly continues.

"WHEN WE were doing 'CBS Reports,' we had 39 or sometimes 52 hours a year. You make your mistakes. Some shows work. Some don't work. You remember only the great ones. What made 'CBS Reports' is that we had an hour or a half-hour every week. Today, when you only get a chance to do two, three, four, five, six hours a year, you have to be a little more cautious, the chances of doing a 'Harvest of Shame' are less."

"Harvest of Shame" was a renowned documentary about the plight of migrant workers in the United States.

It was not untypical of revealing, sometimes shocking probes of national problems that poured out of CBS News when Friendly was there. His long collaboration with the late Edward R. Murrow produced some of the most acclaimed — and denounced — public-affairs programs in the medium's history.

"THE TOUGHEST JOB I ever had at CBS was that decision in 1965 concerning the village of Cam Nay in Vietnam when Morley Safer had this sequence of GIs with cigarette lighters burning down villages — just 500 feet of film of American marines with Zippo lighters systematically burning down a village by putting the flame up to the thatched roofs. Medium shots, long shots, everything.

"I'm seven or eight years older now, but it was a very tough decision for me whether to put it on the air. We Americans thought of ourselves then as always in the right. At CBS we thought twice about putting it on, but we did. We really had no choice."

Yet he also admits that "some of the decisions I take the most pride in — 10 or 15 years later — are those I made not to go with something."

"THE SHRINKAGE of time for such public-affairs shows on TV can be explained in one word according to Friendly: "money."

"If you put on an hour of entertainment at 10 o'clock," he points out, "you can sell those minutes for $45,000. If you put on a documentary, you can sell those minutes for $13,000 — if you're lucky.

"The Chicago Tribune or any other paper will get more of an audience out of its comic strips or its amusement section or its sports than it will out of news in depth. But even the worst newspapers don't end up running nothing but comic strips. Commercial television has become not just a mass medium but the massest medium. It wants to have the largest possible audience all the time.

"THINK OF THAT," he urges with a rising voice, "the largest audience all the time. Put together a newspaper or a magazine that way and you'd go great for a year. But you'd be in the Cracker Jack business. After a year everyone would be so glutted with Cracker Jacks that they'd stop buying your product.

"Commercial broadcasters — and I hear more and more of

TELEVISION NOTES

By JACK GAVER

The Hallmark Hall of Fame series of specials on NBC in the 1972-53 season will include a 90-minute version of the 1967 off-Broadway musical hit, "You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown," based on the Charles M. Schulz comic strip, "Peanuts." The show ran for more than four years. Bill Hinnant, who created the role of Snoopy, the beagle, in the original stage production, will repeat for video.

Comedian-pianist Victor Borge has an unusual deal on a British television special presented as a benefit performance in connection with the opening of a new studio for London Weekend Television. He is the sole performer in the latter half of the show, playing for about 70 minutes, and receives all rights to his portion for showing anywhere except in the British Isles and Australia. Undoubtedly, it will wind up on some American network in the not too distant future.

A new regular member of NBC's "Rowan and Martin's Laugh-In" program in the fall will be Brian Breslar, a guitar-strumming comedian from the night club circuit.

David Hartman, co-star on NBC's "The Bold Ones," has a new long-term deal with Universal Studios that calls for his continuance in that series, a future video series for himself and major guest star appearances.

Although David Frost winds up his 90-minute talk-variety series at mid-year after three successful seasons, he will not be idle. Still with the Westinghouse Broadcasting Co., he will do six world-wide public affairs specials over the next two years in addition to 26 new shows for the forthcoming second season of "The David Frost Revue." Not to mention his television and motion picture activities back home in Britain.

Jean Simmons has been set by producer Jerry Davis to guest star as a princesss in the first episode of the third season of "The Odd Couple" for ABC-TV.

William Conrad, star of television's "Cannon" series, has headed for Cozumel, Mexico, to do some fishing for ABC-TV's "American Sportsman."

Jerry Lewis On The Movies

Comedian Jerry Lewis believes high admission prices and sex-oriented films are keeping the American family away from the movies and hurting the whole motion picture industry.

"Give a family a good movie at a good price, and they'll flock to the theaters," Lewis said. "Movies are an American habit."

A Friendly Look At Television Today

them talking this way — have made TV so into a projection booth, a grind house in a movie theater, running old movies, entertainment, going after the largest possible audience, that there's no room for anything else.

"I'm not even sure if you put on a 'Harvest of Shame' tonight that anybody would know it was there. I think 'The selling of the Pentagon' (a highly controversial CBS News special aired in 1971), which I give very high marks to, made it because of the publicity about it, and by its second running. An interesting lesson there. If the Defense Department hadn't made a big stink about it, it might have gone into limbo. They made it big."

AS HE BORES in on a subject, Friendly's voice tone seems to say, "Isn't this obvious and reasonable, and isn't it maddening the powers that be don't realize it too and act accordingly?"

He has a gift for describing a problem he may have been dealing with all his professional life as if seeing it for the first time, with an intuitive clarity and a common sense free of the insider's typical near-sightedness.

Television itself, for instance. "That box over there," he says, pointing, "may be an interim thing. Nobody ever said the television set had to look like that. A TV picture can be as big as that wall now, and this deep." He makes a thin space with his hands. "Nobody knows whether this system is right for us in 1972."

AND IN THE case of the recent announcement of a Justice Department suit against TV-network control of prime-time programming, Friendly looks beyond the trees.

"The system — and I don't mean the people in it, but the system —has been so corrupted by the dollar drive, that it's not worth having an antitrust case. An antitrust case is to protect the public's right in something. These rights have been so jeopardized in broadcasting that it doesn't matter anymore. To spend three or four years and a couple of million dollars on that is a waste of time, energy, everything."

A morally committed journalist is the best and perhaps only judge of what can be revealed and what should not, according to Friendly. Causes take second place to the exposure of truth.

"I HAVE A great argument with some of my journalist friends," he says, "who claim that divisions within the black movement should not be reported. I don't think you can win that way. Their cause is good enough that whatever pimples and blemishes there are are better seen."

And hs almost religious feeling about the journalist's profession brooks no comedy performance on news shows, such as the ones that have become popular on many local stations and can be felt on network coverage.

"Cuteness in the news is a deformity that may work for a year," he declares, "might even work for two years. But if newsmen won't take themselves seriously, who will? People have forgotten how long it's taken to come this far. In the early days newspaper men wouldn't take television news seriously.

"I NEVER SAID this before, and maybe I shouldn't, but if the ABC local (New York) news — and one of my students is there — continue to stand on their heads, while trying to interpret a complicated and crumbling world, they're in a self-defeating rhythm.

"Because after awhile the laughter stops, and then what have you got left?"

RAVI SHANKAR
A man of multiple roles

On The Stereo Scene

Shankar With The London Symphony — A Successful Blending Of Musical Cultures

By JOHN SUNIER

Some new releases on the Angel label:

RAVI SHANKAR: "Concerto for Sitar and Orchestra" — Shankar/London Symphony Orchestra/Andre Previn - Angel SFO-36806:

No one would disagree that Ravi Shankar, in his multiple roles as performer, teacher and composer, has done more to spread an appreciation of Hindu classical music than any other person in the world.

This new concerto is a fascinating translation of Indian music in the terms of a western symphonic form and style. Its release and live performances have created quite a bit of controversy, with some critics calling it a vulgar parody of two distinct musical cultures.

Granted it may not be as successful as the two splendid "East Meets West" collaborations with Yehudi Menuhin, but it is nonetheless listenable and novel.

Little harmony, counterpoint or modulation is heard since this is absent from Indian music, which depends on almost endless, complex transformations of the melody line. Four different ragas are used, one for each movement of the concerto. Instrumental balance and fidelity in this attractive album are beyond criticism.

WALTON: "Facade — Verses of Edith Sitwell" read by Fenella Fielding and Michael Flanders - Neville Marriner conducting members of the Academy of St. Martin-in-the-Fields - Angel S-36837:

"Facade," now 50 years old, is a really unique musical delight. These rhythmic readings of the witty Sitwell poems to a foreground of music are always good fun, especially when one can follow the fast-tripping lyrics in print while listening. This album does include them; some don't.

However, Flanders' dour delivery and Mrs. Fielding's frequent tongue-trip-ups are no match for the classic version by Dame Edith herself.

VAUGHAN WILLIAMS: "Riders to the Sea;" 'Magnificat" - Helen Watts/Price/Burrowes/Luxon/Ambrosian Singers/Orchestra Nova of London/Meredith Davies - Angel - S-36819:

These two works are rarely performed, even in Britain, but have many fine moments in them.

The first is a one-act opera after synge, in which a mother mourns the death at sea of her husband and sons against a choral and orchestral background representing the pulse of the ocean. Watts is superb in the role of Maurya.

The album's religious composition is a passionate exaltation of the Virgin Mary touched by an oriental flavor in the music and lovely womens' choral support.

VAUGHAN WILLIAMS: "A London Symphony (No. 2)" - London Symphony/Sir Adrian Boult - Angel S-36838:

Who else to play this exuberant work to perfection than the London Symphony Orchestra? This concludes Boult's cycle of all the VW symphonies.

There is much tone-painting that points up the composer's identification as a sort of English Debussy, with scenes of London in the early morning, the lavender-sellers, etc.

SUSATO: "Pleasure of the Court," 12 Dances from "Danserye, 1551"; MORLEY: Dances from "First Booke of Consort Lessons, 1599" - The Early Music Consort of London/David Munrow - Angel S-36851:

Continuing our English kick, this LP will interest especially those TV viewers who enjoyed the BBC production of "The Six Wives of Henry VIII" recently seen on KQED. This group provided the soundtrack music heard.

The LP contains festive dance music of the Renaissance period, vital and cheerful sounding. Many of the tunes will be familiar to the listener due to their appearing again in many different guises during ensuing centuries. The Susato pieces are played not by a few thin-sounding recorders, but by a "big band" such as was used at festive court proceedings.

The instruments used are of course authentic, and they make one wonder why this music is even attempted on more modern instruments.

PREAMBLE TO SEX

Sex is Nature's not-unpleasant imposition
(although widely over-rated),
Which is dedicated to the proposition
That all men should be created.

SAN RAFAEL — MERCER RICHARDS

INCHWORM

Inchworm
Joyous climbing my sleeve,
Cloak of grey cloth with firm repeated extensions and flexions.
Startled then by threat not seen by me
Rigid his body pokes in the air,
A surrogate twig.

Would that I,
Humping my staccato way
over the days of this land, could solve the threat of strange movements
Among enemies about
With camoflauge
Like the inchworm's twigness.

MILL VALLEY — BILL GAROUTTE

TWENTY-ONE

You too, a pretty plumage wear,
A bonny boney beauty fair.
Burlesqued with hair
You hide a Spanish eye.
El Greco loved you,
So do I.
Shall I compare you to a summer's day?
Not quite - and yet, and yet,
The fine bones sway
The tropic mind to light.
You start in harmony
The first day into night.

LARKSPUR — HOPE EMERY

A VISION

A thousand years from now spaceologists from the distant planet
Timus will dig up ancient towns in old Marin.
What will they find?
Marble statues, golden cups, stained glass palaces, or granite steps leading to the sun?
As I now look into the polluted creek I see all:
Empty coke bottles,
Rusted beer cans,
Plastic bottles made in Japan,
Honest politicians in bronze caskets with pockets stuffed with our money.
Good people who loved humanity buried in private plots,
Frank Lloyd Wright's dream turned to rubble, no guards to harass.
But take cheer, they did find twelve live cockroaches in an old red Volkswagen in Richardson Bay flats.
